

Preface:

My goal with "Woke/Yoked/Remote" (WYR) is to culminate everything I've learned scouring the internet for the last two years so you don't have to. While I refer to WYR as a book, it's really going to be more of a guide.

A guide to all the most valuable information that humankind has to offer.

My family has never had cable television, I wasn't allowed on the internet until I was 15 and I didn't get my first flip phone until I was 16. For this reason, when I first got access to the world wide web I was inclined to utilize it as much as possible. I used it to learn how to make money, exercise and to accept different perspectives on the beliefs I was raised with.

I always performed well in school, and after graduating and working a few finance/IT office jobs, I grew disillusioned with the lifestyle I was told to pursue.

I thought I had everything I wanted, I got a full ride/was debt free, had worked in skyscrapers, and secured a career in the field I was passionate about. And yet, somehow, with waking up to an alarm clock 5 times a week and being restricted to two weeks vacation a year, I didn't feel free.

I knew there had to be a better way and thus began my journey.

A little over one year later I'm woke, yoked and (working) remote. I've traveled the country, helped build several cutting edge projects, and am in better mental and physical health than I have ever been. To be honest, I didn't even try that hard. I simply had access to great information.

Having the free time to delve deep into my interests, I learned how to network/do business online, how the mind/the universe itself operates, and how to utilize cutting edge technology and health trends.

Once you know the real rules to the game, playing becomes nearly effortless. The problem is sifting through thousands of years of recorded human history/knowledge/philosophy and finding what works.

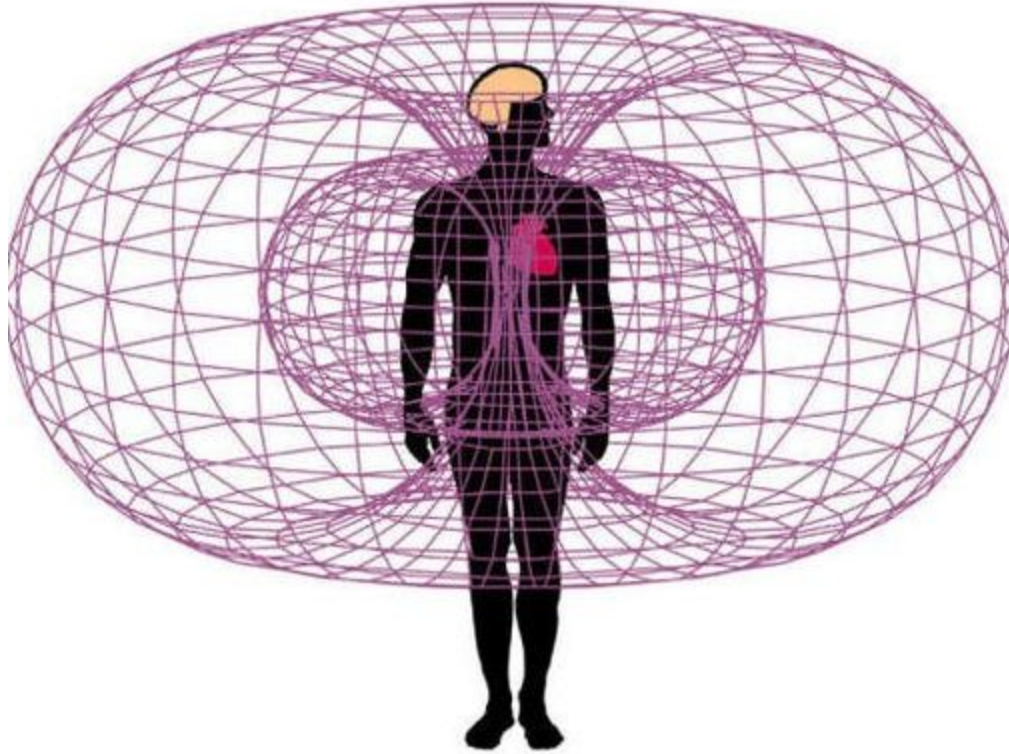

In WYR we'll be covering/connecting an outrageous range of topics including

- Zen Buddhism
- Intermittent Fasting
- Quantum Physics
- GMOs/Pesticides
- Nikola Tesla
- Monetizing your passions
- Hidden ancient human history
- Cryptocurrency

And even a little occult/esoteric knowledge. I've always loved to write and teach, and while I'm notoriously difficult to motivate, I found myself addicted to mentoring others. Only recently I had the realization that writing a book would be a great way to fulfill this passion, and so WYR was born.

That should be just enough backstory, let's dive into it.

WOKE

While the term "woke" has been hijacked by various groups to mean many things over the years, I'd like to define it as “de-programmed.”

We're reclaiming the term.

In our secular, material, busy culture, we are told to simply trust the "experts" to educate and guide us. Whether it be our teachers, priests, scientists, historians, media personalities or politicians, in polite society, you either agree or are exiled.

To be "woke" you need to accept that everything you've been taught could be a lie. To be "woke" is to trust your own judgment, to know how to research evidence and think critically to draw conclusions. It means to let go of the security and convenience of trusting authority figures, it means accepting the uncomfortable feeling of having been manipulated.

Most of all, you need to have a childlike curiosity for the truth and acknowledge that the more you learn, the more you realize we really don't know much at all.

Before we get into things, I just want to be clear: the last thing I want to become is someone's new goto authority figure. I have no interest in making you think a certain way (mostly because it's impossible to do so), all I can do is show you why I think the way I do. Please continue to be skeptical of everything you read, even if it's written by me. I'm only at the place I am because I continually challenged my own beliefs and admitted I was wrong. That being said, I'm sure it will no doubt happen again. Make sure to do your own research, study the material in the links provided and most of all, trust your own judgment!

Alright, let's get things poppin' :)

Section I: Reframing the Universe

“It is the mark of an educated mind to be able to entertain a thought without accepting it”

- Aristotle

I tend to think Aristotle was a pretty smart guy, and I also believe what he describes here is the only way to grow mentally. Most people spend the majority of their time seeking purely to confirm things they already think to be true. I think that if you begin to actively attempt to prove yourself wrong, you will grow more in a year than most people do in a lifetime. That level of open-mindedness is all I ask of you.

The information I'm going to present to you has been purposely hidden from humanity. Instinctively modern day people feel uneasy with the reality our mainstream culture wants to sell them. This is why some people naturally seek out the supernatural through organized religion. It seems almost impossible that we are here simply to seek gratification and obtain physical possessions. If you're reading this right now, you probably agree.

Don't get me wrong, I value organized religion heavily. It has done amazing things for me in my personal life. From a young age, I was taught that I was loved and accepted by the creator of the universe. I was taught I would be loved and forgiven as many times as I asked for it. I was taught to value the institution of family, a moral code and how to have faith. However, I find that every major organized religion has been corrupted in some ways to profit those in control. Whether it be through purposely mistranslating texts, hiding books of the Bible, and encouraging misinterpretations, the original message has been perverted. This corrupted message and leadership leads many to question the divine and become completely materialistic.

This all results in the mass majority of the population having a very skewed perception of what all of this is, why we are here, and who we truly are. My goal is to combine ancient knowledge, religious sacred books, esoteric concepts, and modern theoretical physics to provide you what I believe is most likely the true nature of our experience.

Existence

- All is energy
 - Everything is in motion
 - Atoms moving, protons/neutrons rotating around nucleus
- Vibration
- Frequency

Dimensions

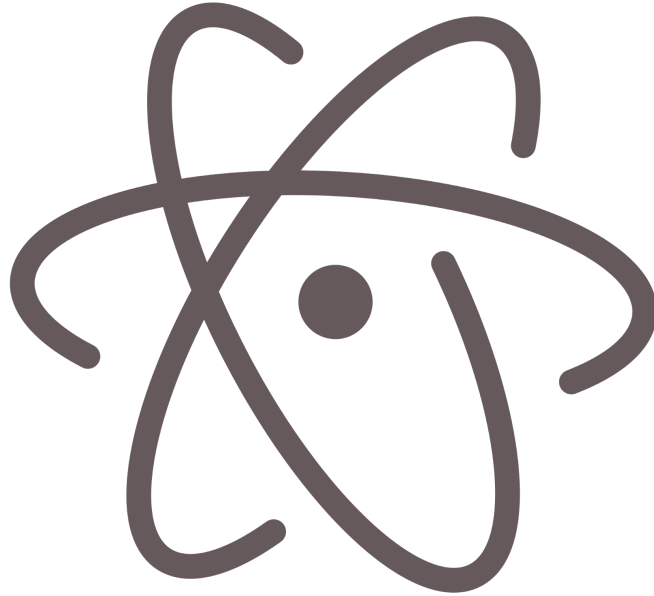

- Density
- 1D, 2D, 3D
- 4D
 - Matrix
 - Time
 - Mind
 - Memories
 - Ego
 - Thoughts = 4D waves
 - Law of Attraction
 - Manifestation
 - Our reality created inside our heads as sensory frequencies are translated
 - Scope of our reality
 - Everything is a duality
 - All have poles
 - Yin/Yang
 - Magnetic poles
 - Male/Female
 - Good/Evil
 - 0's & 1's
 - Computer code
 - Simulation theory
 - Elon Musk

- 5D

- Ether
- Mass Human Consciousness
- All is One: Unity
 - Zen Buddhism
 - Jesus/Buddha: Christ Consciousness
 - Full ether access

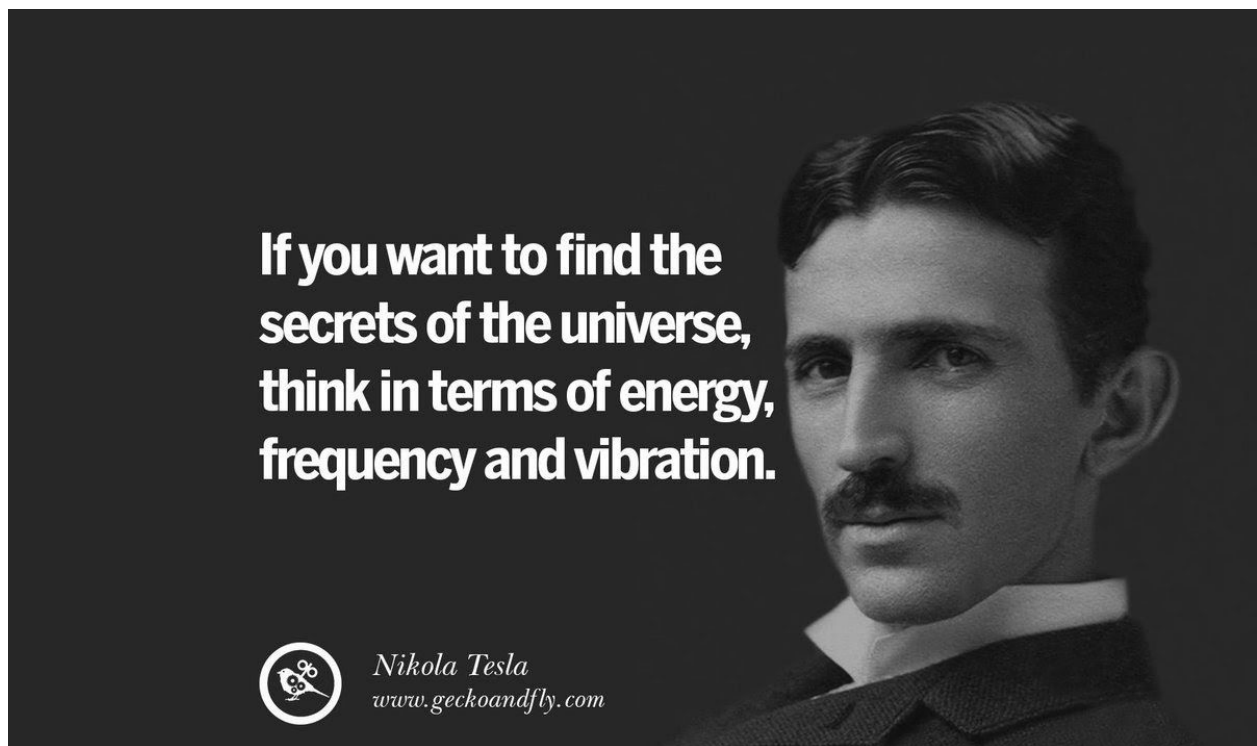

I put this section first as it is imperative to have a clear understanding of the big picture in order to properly apply the more practical stuff. So let's start as big as you can get: What is the universe? How does it operate and why do we exist?

The Energetic Universe

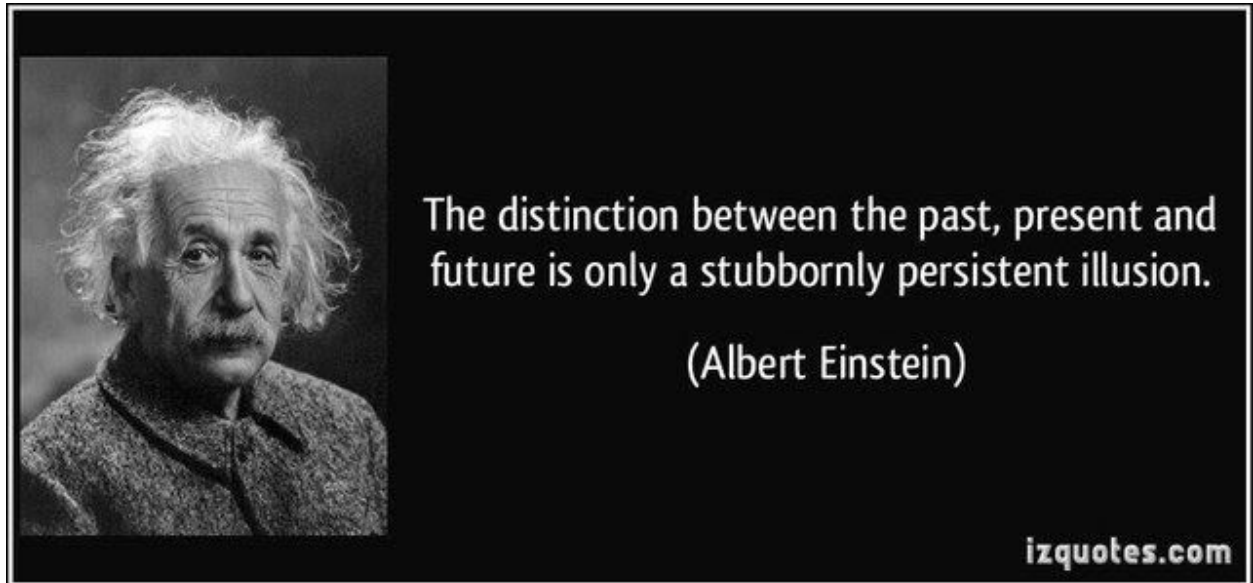

To grasp the true nature of the universe, you have to understand that all is energy. Yes, even me and you, we are simply made of atoms, which are composed of a nucleus surrounded by a cloud of constantly moving electrons. Take for instance that a Hydrogen atom is 99.9999999999996% empty. Yup, that means the only reason we don't just pass through other "solid" objects is because our electrons are occupying the same frequency band, creating interference. The reason your hand can pass through water is that its atoms are moving faster, at a higher frequency, and therefore less dense than your hand and therefore makes way. This is a similar story with wifi, X-rays, 5g, and radio. Except for the difference there is so high that the waves penetrate your body completely with barely any resistance.

Ok, so if all is energy, how do we further break down the universe? Density. Or as some refer to it, dimensions. I'm sure everyone is familiar with 1 dimensional, 2 dimensional and 3-dimensional objects. All simply a level of complexity (or density) higher. Unfortunately, the simple 3d model of our world leaves a lot of questions unanswered. How does the universe keep expanding? When did "time" begin? What are thoughts/memories/emotions? What is consciousness?

To answer these questions, we simply need to think in terms of energy, frequency, and vibration.

4D

Albert Einstein believed that time is the 4th dimension of reality. The only problem with that being that time only exists because our minds are around to record it. Without our minds recording past events, nature would simply carry on operating in its various cycles.

Moss doesn't care what month it is, fish aren't aware of their ancestry, and trees don't know how old they are. This seems to imply that time and mind are the same thing or at least are operating in the same plane.

This means that thoughts are simply 4th-dimensional waves. Our memories, our egos, our dreams are all apart of this higher, invisible 4th density, operating above the 3d world. This would follow as our whole perception of reality is a composite of signals our senses send to the mind to recreate. What we see is just the signals our eyes send us, what we hear is dependent on the ear we hear it with, what we smell is just how we interpret electrical signals from our face's orifices. Furthermore, we often get tunnel vision and are completely oblivious to everything except what we pay attention to. Indeed we are actively creating our respective realities.

So what are the practical applications of this information?

Some of you may be familiar with the "law of attraction" which states that what you think about is actively and seemingly magically attracted into your life. This is also referred to as "manifestation." While it seems crazy, knowing that our thoughts operate above the physical plane, and reality is created inside our heads, it goes to reason that our thoughts may have MUCH more power than we give them credit for.

Well, this is a very interesting concept. If true, why is this power not the most talked about the ability of humanity? Why isn't this laid out plainly in schools? Why is this not the focus of psychology? Why don't churches teach you how to harness it?

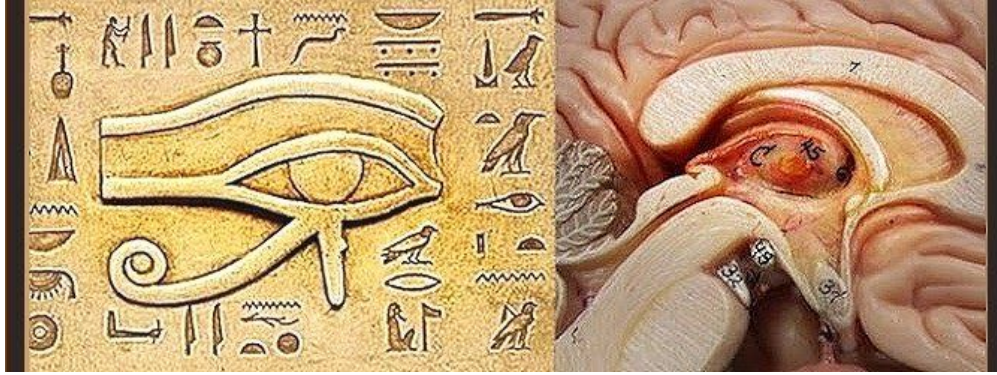

Mainly because it's been hidden, on purpose, in plain sight.

A concept that we will be talking more about throughout the book is the symbology and methods used by the ruling class of human civilization to sedate and control the masses. One of their core practices is hiding their secrets in plain sight, where has there ever been a better place?

You may recognize the image above from the back of the dollar bill. This is the “all seeing eye” a popular symbol used by secret societies (which included the founding fathers of the United States.) To say that the dollar bill is the only place to find this symbology would be inaccurate. It tends to pop up in just about every culture around the world.

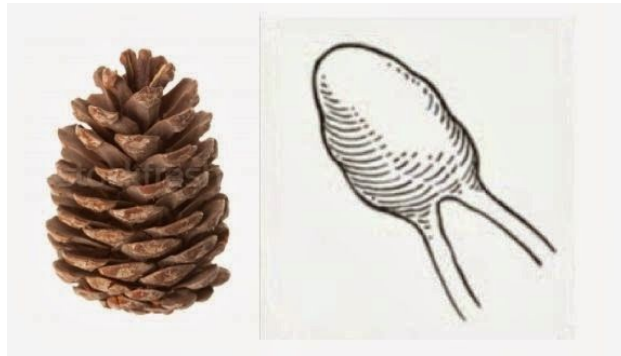

Take, for instance, Ancient Egypt. You may have seen the symbol below on the left before.

On the left is what is called the “Eye of Horus” a symbol that signifies protection, power, and good health. Now, on the RIGHT is the cross-section of the human brain. Yup, I’m saying what you think I’m saying. The all-seeing eye, the “third eye” and the Eye of Horus, all refer to a very REAL part of your body.

So what part of the brain is that image of? I’d like to introduce you to quite possibly the most important section of your biology. The pineal gland sits in the middle of your brain, deep inside the skull. This is very interesting as it has many similar features to your ocular related organs. Yes, despite having no direct access to visible light, the pineal gland’s structure is very similar to that of your external eyes. Now, why would that be? Is it possible your pineal gland is receiving frequencies as well? Perhaps just ones of much higher vibration? Let's look at some other cultural uses of the symbol for clues.

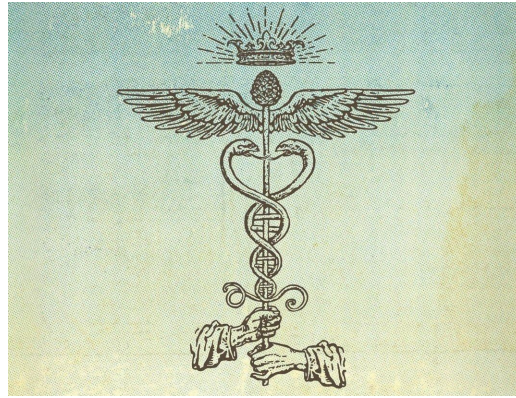

Ever notice how statues of Buddha always seem to have some kind of pine cone patterned heads? Well believe it or not the (PINE)al gland bares a striking resemblance to its tree dropping counterpart.

To pretend that the Buddhists are the only group to use such symbology would be inaccurate. In fact, it can be found in many places. Everywhere from the Vatican to Masonic lodges to the hieroglyphs of the Ancient Sumerians.

Now, why on God's green earth would all of these groups be so obsessed with a part of the body we CAN'T EVEN SEE?!?! Well, that question will lead us down a completely separate rabbit whole, prepare to dive.

You have most likely seen the symbol above used in the medical field by groups such as the US Army Medical Corps.

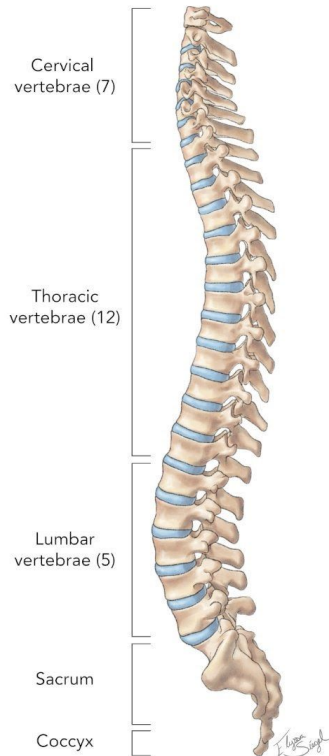

So what is it exactly? Well, it is called the caduceus, the main symbol of the Mythical greek god Hermes. Hermes was a messenger of the gods, who would travel between realms to deliver messages. Other things he was associated with include the afterlife, transitions, and dimensions. So what does it mean though? What do the snakes, wings, and crown mean? For that, we will have to switch back to an eastern ideological concept.

Powers	Chakra	Truth to Uphold	Sound
Crown Spirituality, knowing who you are, letting go, enlightenment, awareness.		Live in the Present Moment Time/Space	Om* Sahasrara
Third Eye Intellect, brain, open-mindedness, divine reason, bigger picture, trust.		Seek only Divine Truth Light/Dark	Aum Ajneya
Throat Self expression, choice, will, follow your dream, faith, trusting life.		Surrender to Divine Will Ether	Ham Vishuddha
Heart Love, forgiveness (does you good), compassion.		Love is Divine Power Air	Yam Anahata
Solar Plexus Personality, self-esteem, gut instinct.		Honor Self Fire	Ram Manipura
Sacral Creativity and sexuality, Power, control, money, relationships.		Honor One Another Water	Vam Swadishтана
Root Family and social belonging, Safety and security.		All is One Earth	Lam Mooladhara

We will go into Chakras more in-depth during the “Yoked” portion of this guide, but for now, we’ll briefly go over the basics. So what does this system describe? Mainly the way that energy flows through the human body. Each chakra is associated with a gland that governs the core functions of the human form, and therefore an energy center.

So how does this energy flow through the body? Mainly up the 33 vertebrae (more on that number later) of the spine.

So I think it is safe to assume that Hermes staff is describing this all-important energetic system of the body. The snakes are the chakra energy flowing up and down the staff (spine). Now, what are the wings and the crown portion representing? This question brings us back to the pineal gland, what EXACTLY does it do???

Well to get to the point: the pineal gland is the seat of the soul.

The reason it has a similar structure to your eyes is that it is also taking in frequencies, just 4th-dimensional ones. This is where the concept and power behind the “Law of Attraction” comes from. This is because not only is the pineal gland receiving frequencies, it is sending them as well. These signals transcend space and time and therefore make the human mind the most powerful tool in the Universe.

“If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light” - Matthew 6:22

When this FIRST eye (the mind’s eye) is used in combination with the other two eyes, you get your true connection to reality. When you unlock the third perspective point, you can see beyond this realm: the 5th dimension.

Ok, so what is the scope of our reality? What are the characteristics that define it as a whole? Mainly duality.

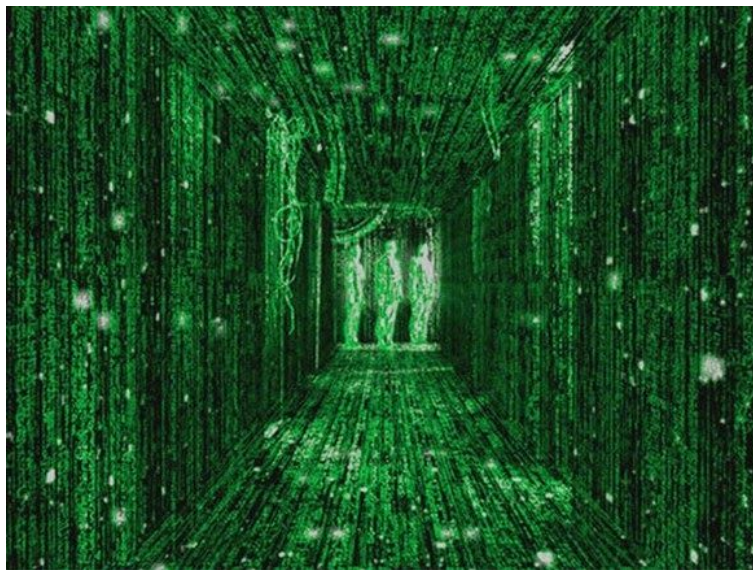

The Chinese are fond of using this symbol to describe the nature of this 4th-dimensional viewpoint, matrix, reality, whatever you want to call it.

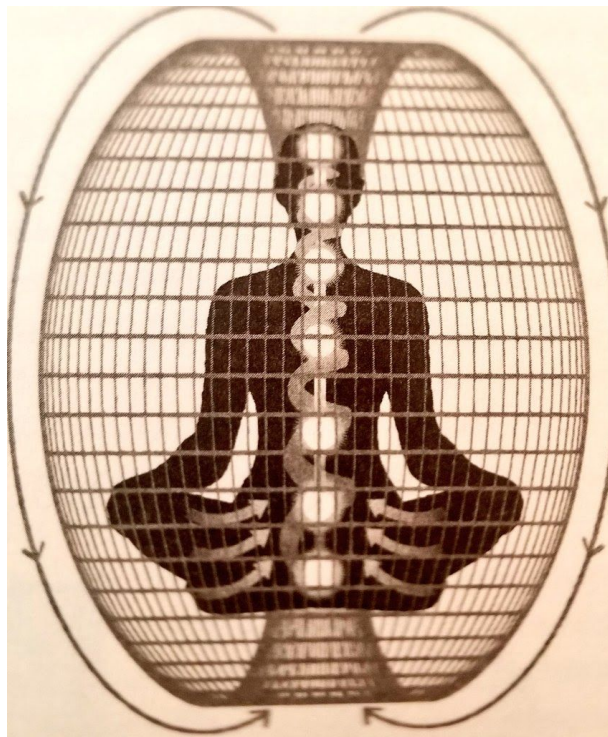

- Yin and Yang

- Male and Female
- Light and Dark
- Positive and Negative Poles
- 0's and 1's

At this point, some of you may be reminded of the "simulation theory" (the matrix) that is gaining a lot of popularity in the mainstream these days. Elon Musk, for instance, says that there is a "one in billions" chance that we are living in an authentic reality, not a computer simulation.

So if our reality is a simulation, and thoughts are what shape the game, who the hell is playing? Perhaps this most important question of life may be experienced through the practice of balancing your personal energy centers, aligning your chakras, bringing your energy up the spine to the pineal gland and consciously connecting to the unconscious, the 5th dimension.

This is the most well-hidden secret of all time, we are in fact creators. We indeed have a spark of divinity within us, and no society conscious of this fact could ever be ruled by a bloodthirsty, elite few. To find out exactly why they keep this knowledge to themselves, we'll have to analyze what the 5th dimension truly is.

5D

All perceptible matter comes from a primary substance, or tenuity beyond conception, filling all space, the akasha or luminiferous ether, which is acted upon by the life giving Prana or creative force, calling into existence, in never ending cycles all things and phenomena.

Nikola Tesla
"Man's Greatest Achievement," 1907

CE collective . . .
EVOLUTION

This is a fun topic as it ties together just about every belief system in the world. Turns out that Buddha, Jesus, and Nikola Tesla were all trying to tell us the same thing.

All is One.

If the defining characteristic of the 4th dimension is duality, the 5th's is without a doubt unity. WTF is that supposed to mean? I think the easiest way to describe the concept is by describing the goal of meditation. In meditation, the goal is to "clear your mind", many people have problems with this as they keep thinking to themselves "don't think, don't think, don't think" mentally chasing their own tail. The key to mastering the process is to just "observe" your thoughts, let them come and go. After a while you begin to realize that you are not your thoughts at all, you simply observe them. This is what's known as connecting to "source."

What is source? Other names for it include:

- God
- Love
- Now
- Gravity

Nikola Tesla referred to it as the "aether." Tesla created all of his inventions in his mind, he said he could see them clearly and would even test them 100% mentally. Only after he had perfected them would he finally draw out the blueprints for his engineers to build. He claimed he received all of his ideas by accessing an omnipresent mass consciousness, he called the aether.

In Buddhism, the ultimate truth of existence is called Śūnyatā, or "nothingness." However, it is not how we usually interpret nothingness, what they mean is more like "no - thing - ness." Or the idea that there truly is no way to describe any one "thing" as separate from another, an object is inseparable from its environment. This means that all of creation is apart of a larger whole on a level we can't comprehend.

Much like a 2d cartoon character trying to imagine what a 3d world would look like, our 4d egos cannot comprehend what lies in the 5th dimension.

Jesus had an identical message. “God became man so that man might become God” is a common description of the Christ story. Jesus washed the feet of his disciples to show that all people (including him) were equal. The concept of the 5th dimension also ties in with the trinity concept. The idea that 3 things could be the whole god individually transcends our 4d concept of duality. It’s truly inconceivable to the human mind, and perfectly exemplifies the nature of God/source. A conscious connection to the 5th dimension is referred to as “Christ Consciousness.”

Unfortunately for the world’s populace, these messages have been misrepresented, perverted and twisted to support the centralization of power in human society. These messengers are either elevated to god status (hiding the fact that we contain the potential for the same level of awakening) or are erased from the history books (like Tesla).

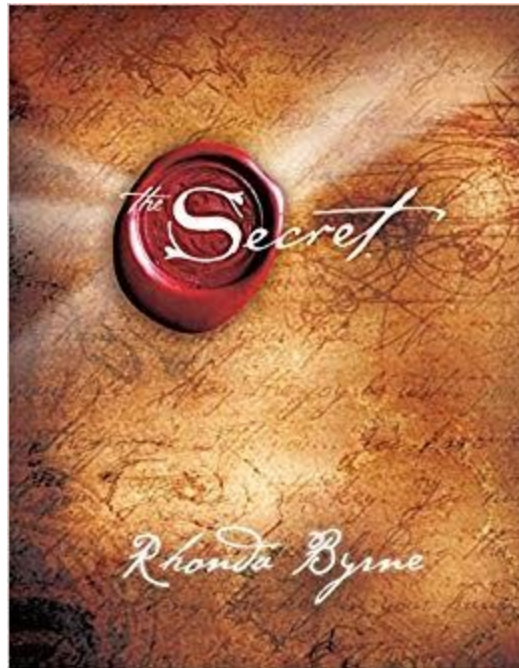

So if we have this natural ability to connect to the rest of creation, what other reasons have the public not become privy to this fact? Well firstly, many people do utilize it subconsciously, when you act on intuition, you are acting subconsciously on knowledge pulled from the aether.

Much like how slave masters purposely keep their slaves illiterate to keep them subdued, we find ourselves in a similar situation. The modern day elite doing with the knowledge of the pineal gland and its true power. In fact, they fluoridate our water which causes calcification of the pineal gland, rendering it almost useless. This is among many poisons they stuff us with. Others include dangerous pesticides like Monsanto's "Round-Up" that contains glyphosate, a chemical now proven to be cancerous in a court of law:

The image is a screenshot of a news article on the USA Today website. The article title is "Man awarded $80M in lawsuit claiming Monsanto's Roundup causes cancer". The author is Kelly Tyko, USA TODAY. The article was published on March 27, 2019, at 6:36 p.m. ET and updated on March 28, 2019, at 2:45 a.m. ET. The main image shows a man in a suit being embraced by a woman in a dark jacket. Below the image, the text reads: "A U.S. jury has awarded $80 million in damages to a California man in a high-stakes trial over his claim that Monsanto's Roundup weed killer caused his cancer. The agribusiness giant says it will appeal the decision. (March 27) AP". To the right of the article, there is a "Share your feedback to help improve our site experience!" prompt and a "POPULAR STORIES" section featuring a red sedan with the headline "Sedans ain't dead, and some of them are sweet deals" and a link to usatoday.com | 11 hours ago.

However, despite the elites' best efforts, the information on how to utilize our full creative power is slowly leaking out. Movies like "The Secret" and audio series like "Your Wish is Your Command" (both can be found on the source material page) have promoted the concept of the "law of attraction" which states that whatever you think about most of the time, you get/become. This makes sense as we know that thoughts are 4d waves operating outside of our 3d worlds, so it goes to reason that 4d frequencies would attract like frequencies.

These concepts seem pretty new age and sacrilegious, but in fact, it is mentioned in the sacred texts many times.

Take for instance: Matthew 13:12

For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

This seems like a very cruel thing for a man of god to say. It seems that the message is the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

However, take a look at what happens if you add a word that was seemingly erased:

For whosoever hath GRATITUDE, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not GRATITUDE, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

As you can see, the message reads much differently now. Clearly, someone was trying to keep the concept of emitting gratitude vibrations attracting more things that will make you feel that way from the people.

Ok so if ancient civilizations knew about this powerful, now hidden information, in what other ways were they more advanced? What other practices exist to further understand, predict, and interact with reality?

This will lead us to the second section of WOKE: “The Language of the Universe”

Section II: The Language of the Universe

Ok, so now that we have a frame of reference to work off of, let's try to figure out how to expand on this new perspective. If all is energy, we should be able to create a code to effectively communicate with it. If the Universe is indeed one mass consciousness, it must have a language in which it speaks to us.

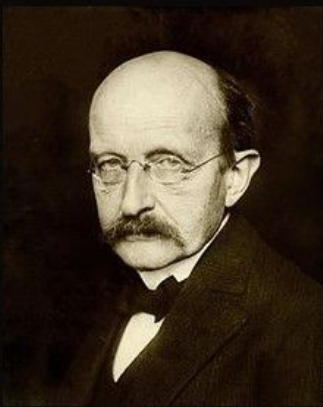

Has anyone in humanity ever discovered such a language? Does it exist in our modern science already? Was it found in our ancient past? If it has been found, who has used it? In what way did they harness it? How has it been hidden from the majority of the species?

Let's dive into it.

To answer any of these questions we need to fully understand the nature of our base reality. As we learned in the previous section, all is energy, frequency, and vibration. But how do we know this for sure? Aren't atoms (from the Latin "atomos" or uncuttable) still physical electrons whirling around them? Like even if they're just REALLY, REALLY small, they still have defined physical limits right?

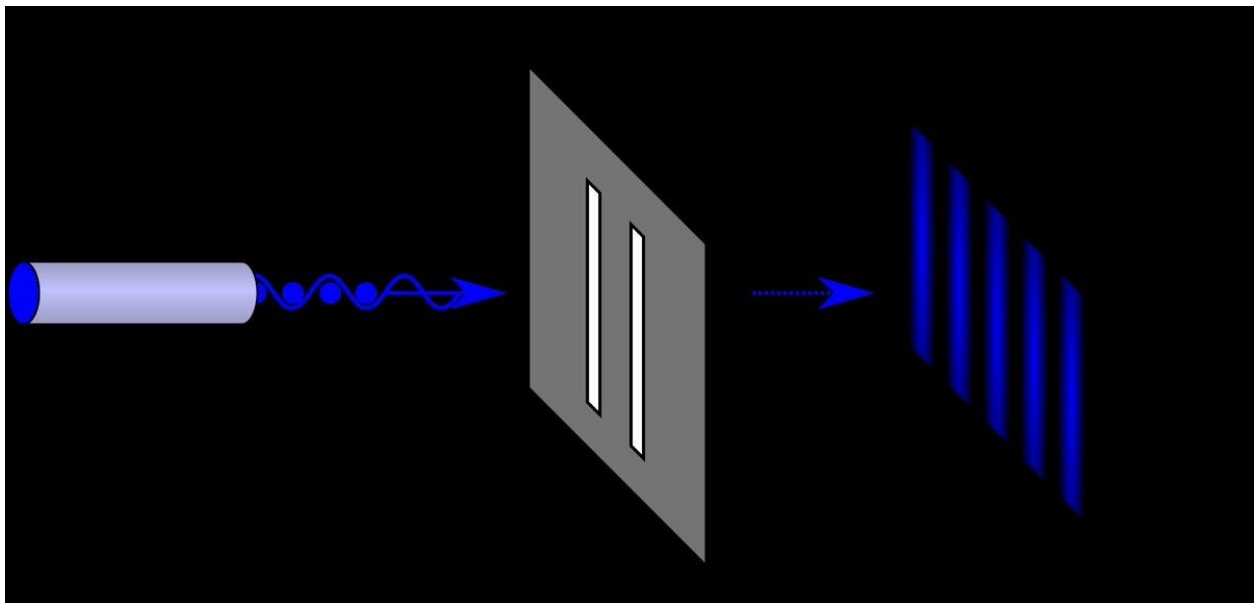

Naw, the funny thing is they really don't. To understand how something could be undefinable in a physical sense, we'll have to dive into some casual quantum physics.

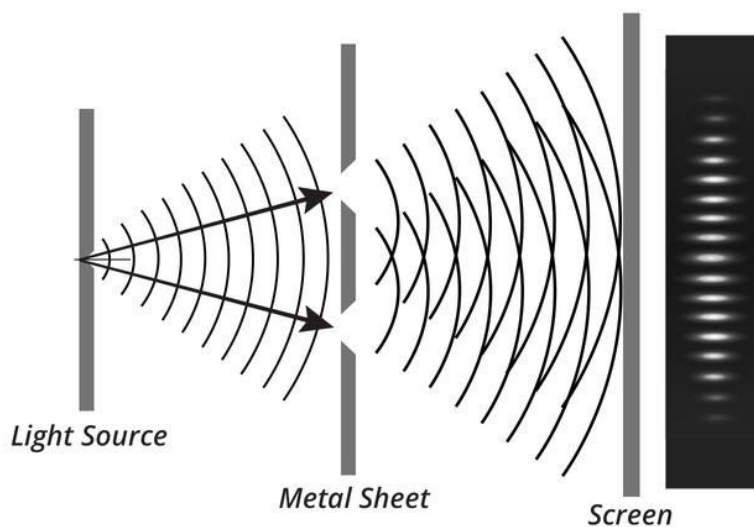

Science cannot solve the ultimate mystery of nature. And that is because, in the last analysis, we ourselves are a part of the mystery that we are trying to solve.

(Max Planck)

The “Double Slit Experiment” is my favorite example of this concept. The purpose of this exercise is to determine if electrons act as particles or as waves. Very simply, electrons are shot at a board with two slits in it, then hit the wall behind. The impact patterns of the electrons on the wall are then recorded.

The electrons are first shot in waves, then individually. As a wave, the electrons hit the board, go through the slits, and form two new waves on the other side, resulting in many lines of impact.

When shot as particles, you would expect only two impact lines on the board. The single electron can only go through one of the two holes, right?? Seemingly not so. The impact patterns are the EXACT SAME. How could a single electron experience the same interference patterns that would create these impacts? How could we find out?

Well, obviously we should just set up a device directly behind the board to capture which hole the single electron came out of. Do you know what happens when you do this? The pattern changes. Suddenly the electrons shot individually only form a two-line pattern.

Almost as if the universe only decided what outcome to result in based off if anyone was watching. So the observer directly influences (creates) reality. Odd, this seems to tie in with what we covered in the previous section.

We are indeed creating our realities, everything is simply energy that only takes shape based on our perception of it. If a tree falls in the woods and no one's around to hear it.... Well, who cares.

Anyways, you know how else you could describe energy (like radio, TV, and wifi signals)? Information. Ok, so if everything's information, do we have any existing systems we can use to control, manipulate and predict how things will turn out? Yes, mainly physics. What is physics? Well, "quantum" (base word quad) physics describes the 4th dimension, so normal physics must describe the 3rd dimension. What's 2d mathematics? Just plain old numbers. What's 1-dimensional math? Just 0's and 1's.

And would you look at that? Suddenly we find ourselves back at this duality nature of the Universe. It appears as at the core, all of existence is simply NUMBERS.

Ok, so you probably realize what I'm trying to say is that numbers are the language of the Universe. Of course, this is the mainstream view of the scientific community anyway as that's how they describe it themselves. But do numbers hold even more significance and more far-reaching power than simply math equations? Has anyone found these secrets? And if so, what magnificent feats have they accomplished using them?

The day science begins to study non-physical phenomena, it will make more progress in one decade than in all the previous centuries of its existence.

Nikola Tesla
www.geckoandfly.com

Ah, this Tesla guy again? Who the heck is he anyway? Wasn't he just Edison's lab bitch? Yes, that's what they teach you in school (if you hear his name at all). He actually was the smartest man to ever walk the earth and his inventions proved it. AC Power, Radio Remote control. And those are just among the ones the public got.

Well what else did he claim to have invented/accomplished

- A death ray
- An earthquake machine
- Time Travel
- Contact with extraterrestrials

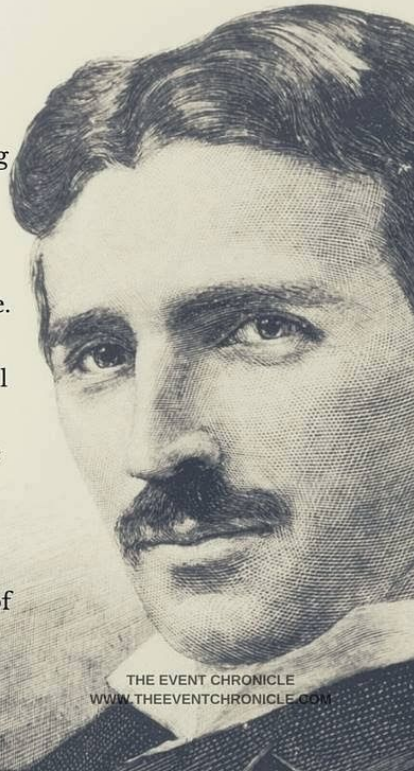

He also describe a modern smartphone in detail.

Nikola Tesla Describing a Cell Phone in 1926

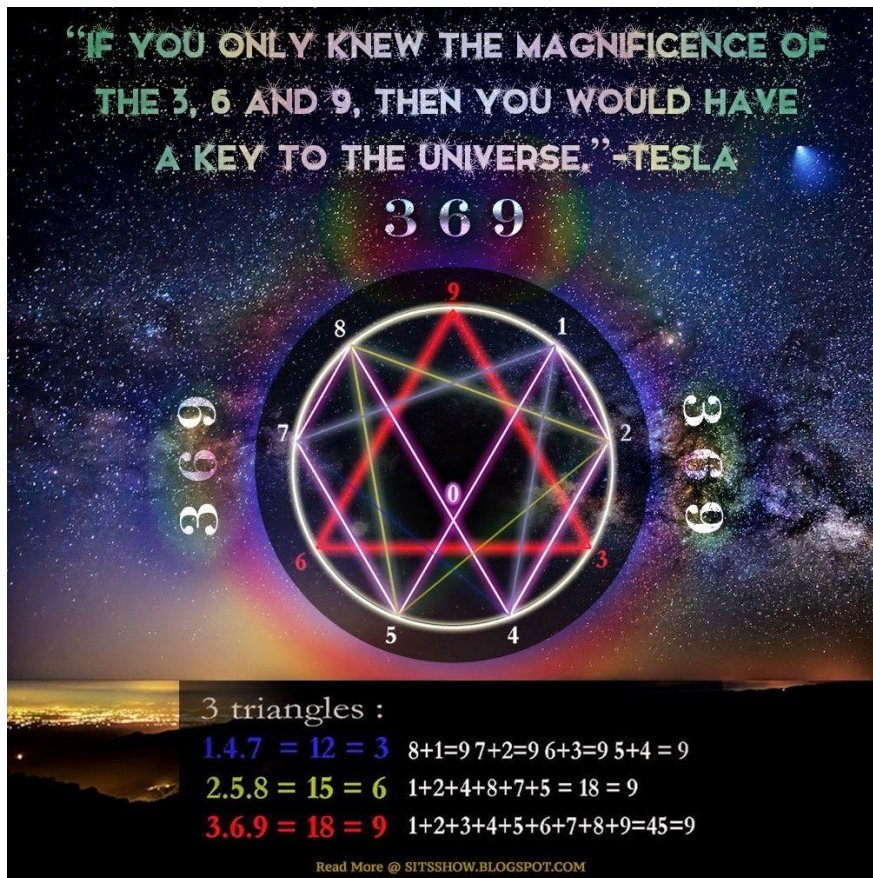

"When wireless is perfectly applied the whole earth will be converted into a huge brain, which in fact it is, all things being particles of a real and rhythmic whole. We shall be able to communicate with one another instantly, irrespective of distance. Not only this, but through television and telephony we shall see and hear one another as perfectly as though we were face to face, despite intervening distances of thousands of miles, and the instruments through which we shall be able to do all of this, will fit in our vest pockets."

Nikola Tesla, 1926

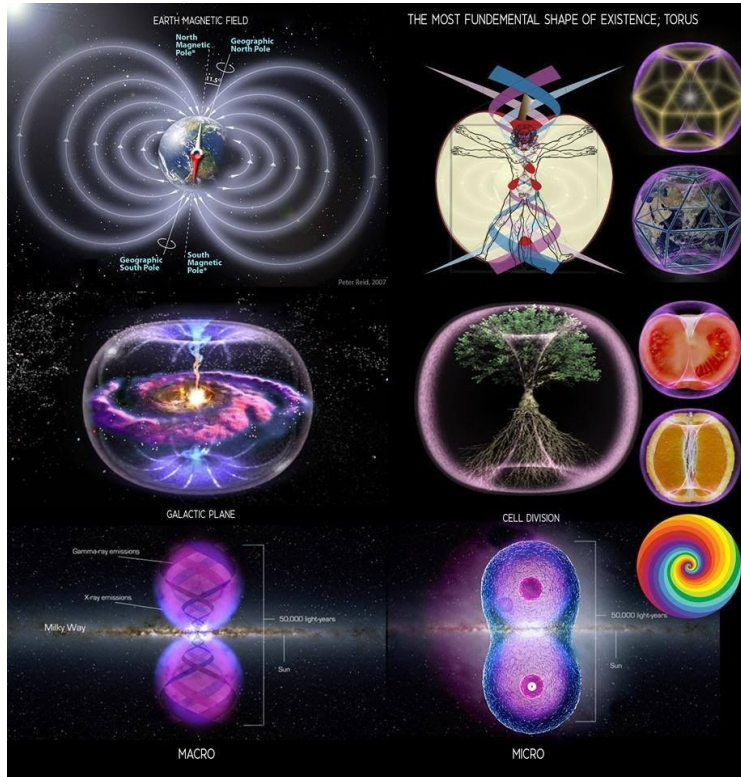

How could he have possibly done this? What secrets of the universe did he know? Oh, I forgot, that tower thingy above was the free wireless energy system he built. Anyone in the world could have received free wireless power once he completed his network. That's when the banking elite (JP Morgan AKA the Rothschilds, we'll talk about them later) finally pulled the plug on him.

So yeah, that secret thing:

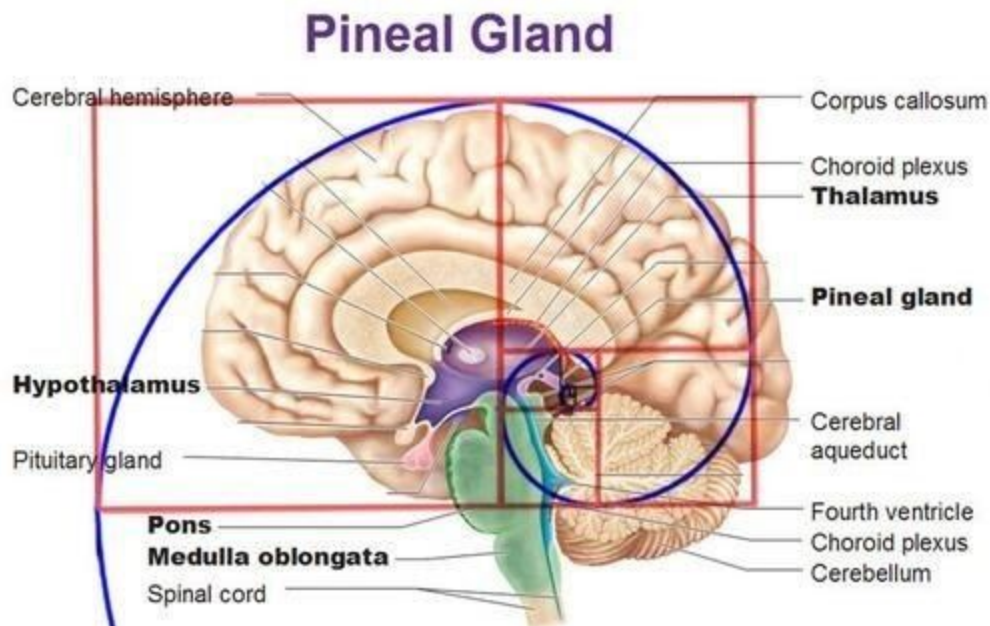

Tesla was OBSESSED with numbers 3, 6, and 9. In this diagram, you see that the 3 triangles that make up the most basic 3d object all add up to 3, 6, and 9. These are the numbers of frequency, as everything is frequency, this is the code to the Universe. Ok so if this code is so powerful, there should be more obvious evidence in the world around us.

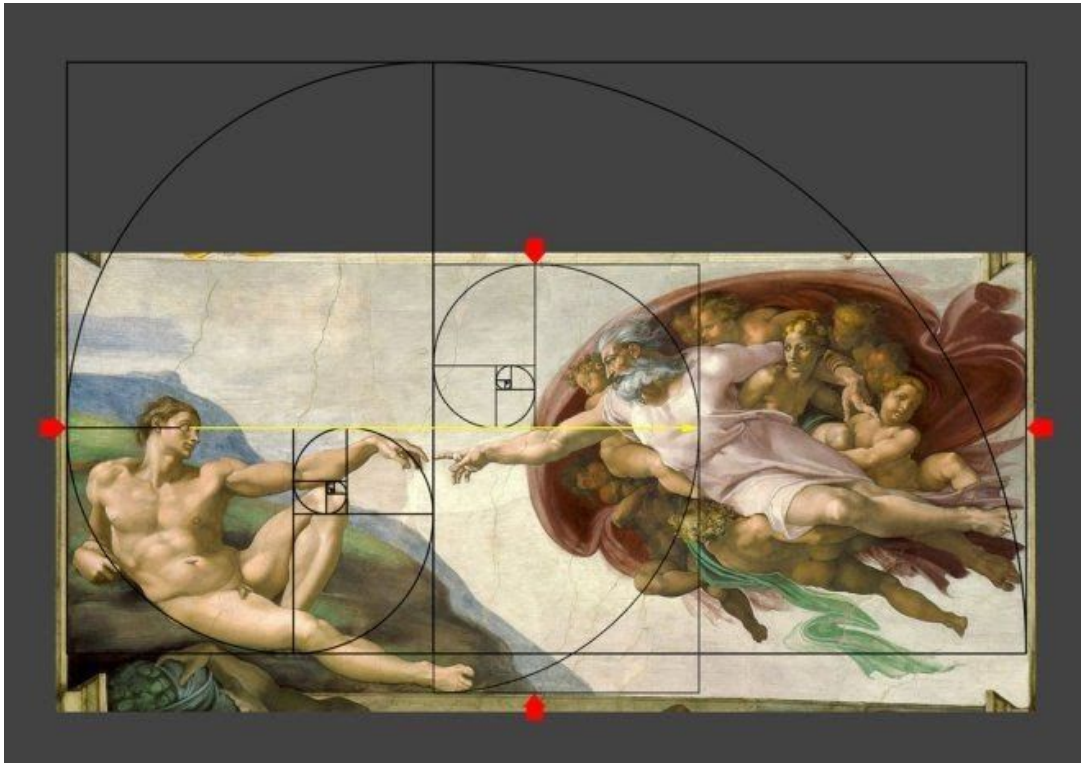

Hmmmm, so what else describes 2d math besides the numbers 1-9? Geometry. And more importantly, SACRED geometry.

As you can see, the Universe, at every level is governed by the same code. From cell division to the human body, to an apple, to the tree it grew on, to the Earth ITSELF: all following the exact same ratios. This is referred to as the Golden Ratio or Fibonacci's constant. To continue the theme of building on material covered in the previous section, look where we now find ourselves:

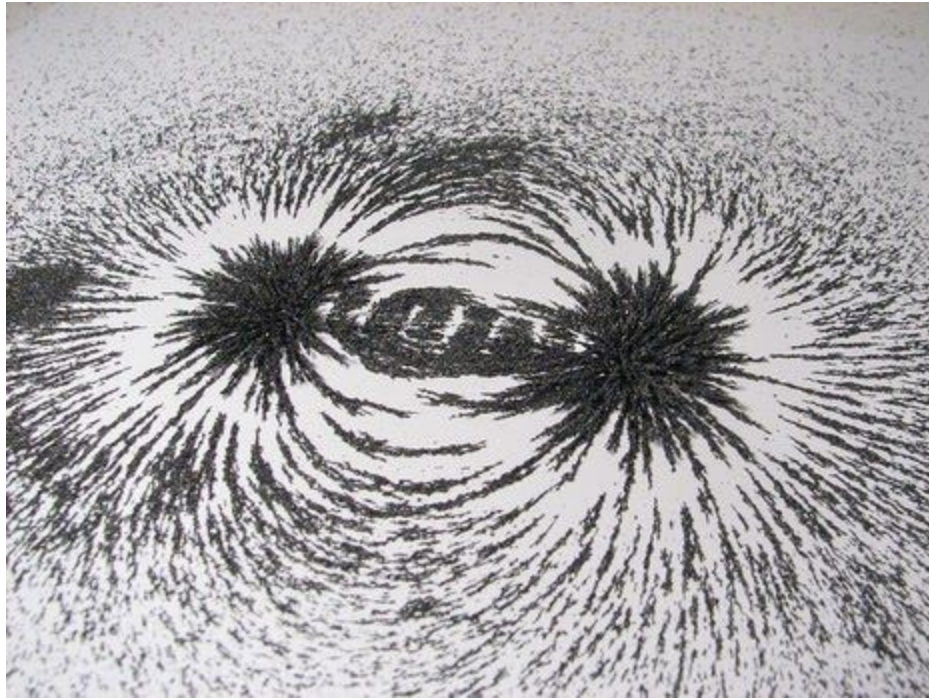

Not only is the human mind a perfect match for the Golden Ratio, but the pineal gland itself is also right at the origin point. Does our pineal gland, and therefore our entire mind, gain it's creative powers over reality because it is built in the Universe's (or you could say God's) literal image?

The ancient Egyptians seemed privy to this knowledge as well, as the “Eye of Horus” symbol of the pineal gland (covered the last section) was used in their system of measurement. It represented a fractional quantification system to measure parts of the whole.

The 3d version of this constant is known as a “torus”, this shape shows how energy forms matter in between two oppositely charged poles. This once again brings us back to the duality nature of our reality. It can be seen perfectly by observing what happens when you put a magnet onto a surface covered by iron shavings.

Does this shape remind you of anything else? Perhaps the Yin/Yang symbol? The numbers 6 and 9? How about this one? Yup, the symbol we use to describe “infinity”, something without end (time), fitting to describe the 5d Universe.

So Tesla was able to break the code of the Universe by acknowledging the true power of numbers. If each number has its own specific energy and purpose in reality, has any research been done in developing a system to decode it? Obviously, numbers not only control what happens in our 3d world. Is it possible they run things in other unseen dimensions as well?

This brings us to Numerology. The true programming language of the Matrix.

0123456789
 ० १ २ ३ ४ ५ ६ ७ ८ ९
 I II III IV V VI VII VIII IX X
 一 二 三 四 五 六 七 八 九
 ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ
 〇 一 二 三 四 五 六 七 八 九

Numerology? Isn't that just like astrology for lazy people? Haha, kind of.

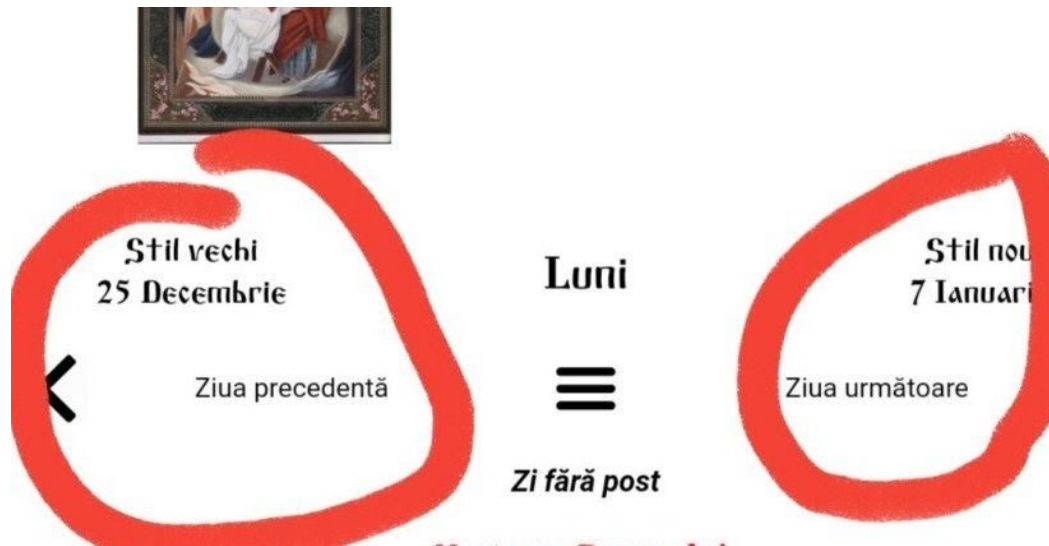

Numerology is a system that defines the physical and energetic manifestations of each number and combination of numbers into archetypes. So each day of the year, for instance, has unique energy. People who practice Numerology use this information to understand what way energy is flowing that day and act accordingly. There are many other applications of Numerology as well, such as finding what is called a "Life Path" for an individual based off of his birthday.

For instance, I was born on January 7th, 1995. So to find my life path we would simply do the following calculation:

$$1+7+1+9+9+5= 32 (3+2=5)$$

So I am a 5 life path, and since I was born on the first 7 day of the year I have pure 7 energy. 5 is the number of looks and travel, and 7 is the number of knowledge, mentorship, and teaching. Fairly accurate for a guy who's writing a book teaching hidden knowledge, fitness, and ways to make money while traveling, huh? If you want to learn more about these level of Numerology I would highly recommend getting in contact with the #GG33 group on Twitter lead by Gary Grinberg (who also has a Jan. 7th birthday). Oh and fun fact, not only did Nikola Tesla die on Jan. 7th but in the Gregorian calendar, that's when Christmas falls as well. So Jesus also has the same birthday (not that I'm developing a Christ complex lol).

Ok, so if this system actually exists and has real value, we should see the most powerful people in the world using it as well, is there any evidence of that? Absolutely. Take for instance how the Freemasons have 33 degrees (33 is the master teacher, also, remember the spines 33 vertebrae?).

Other historical examples include World War 1 being ended on Armistice Day, November 11th, 1918 (11/11/1) as $(1+9+1+8=19/1=9=10/1+0=1)$. 11 is an extremely powerful number as it too represents the duality nature of reality. That's why the elite also chose 9/11 to bring down the TWIN towers (which looked like a giant 11).

A more recent example was the October 10th, 2018 (1/1/11) as (1(0), 1(0), (2+0+1+8=11) stock market crash, which was a record setting 800 points. Funny thing was this date was put on the cover of a 1988 The Economist magazine. On the neck of the phoenix are the numbers 10/10/2018. An event planned 30 years in advance.

Ok, so Numerology is clearly an important system to familiarize yourself with, what are its other applications? If this truly is the code we use to communicate with the universe, we should see it everywhere and use it everyday. For this we'll take a look our written language, starting with letters. Turns out the language of the Universe is the one we use all the time.

You see, each letter can be translated into a corresponding number, 1-26. So A=1, B=2 and so on and so forth. These two primary systems are actually one in the same. You can see this in mathematics when you reach the level of algebra, it appears that two separate incarnations are needed to fully capture the complexity of the 3d universe.

What are some examples of this? Take for instance the (L)etter L. This is the 12th letter of the alphabet. Reduced, $1+2=3$. This is may be why L words are some of the most powerful influences over our 3d world: life, love, light.

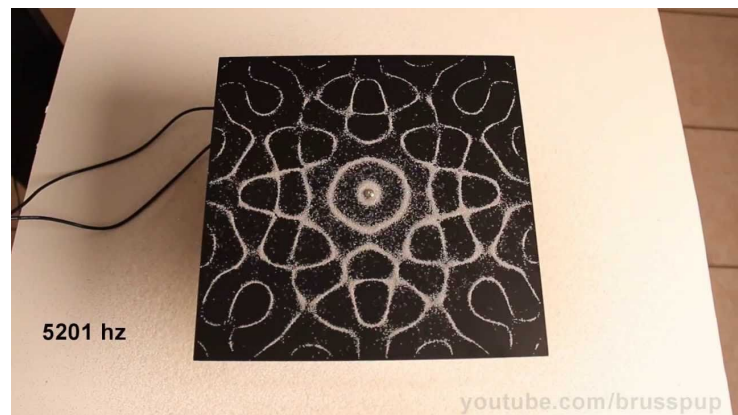

Let's take a look at the 13th letter of the alphabet: M. Reduced, $1+3=4$, here we find words that seemingly have a huge influence over our 4d (M)atrix: magic, money, moments, marriage, majesty, masons, music.

This is seemingly an interesting pattern, no? Does it continue? Let's see. N is the 14th (N)umber of the alphabet. Reduced, $1+4=5$, is it possible that N words are some of the most powerful 5d related words? Now, Nothing, Never, Not. All of these words are used to describe the full scope of the infinite, timeless 5th dimension. Without time, all we have is the eternal NOW. Remember the buddhists believe the ultimate reality is NO-THING-NESS, or the idea that there is no way to separate one thing from another, all is 1. In the Hindu tradition, they believe that the only way you can describe God is "neti neti" (नेति नेति), a Sanskrit expression which means "not this, not this", or "neither this, nor that."

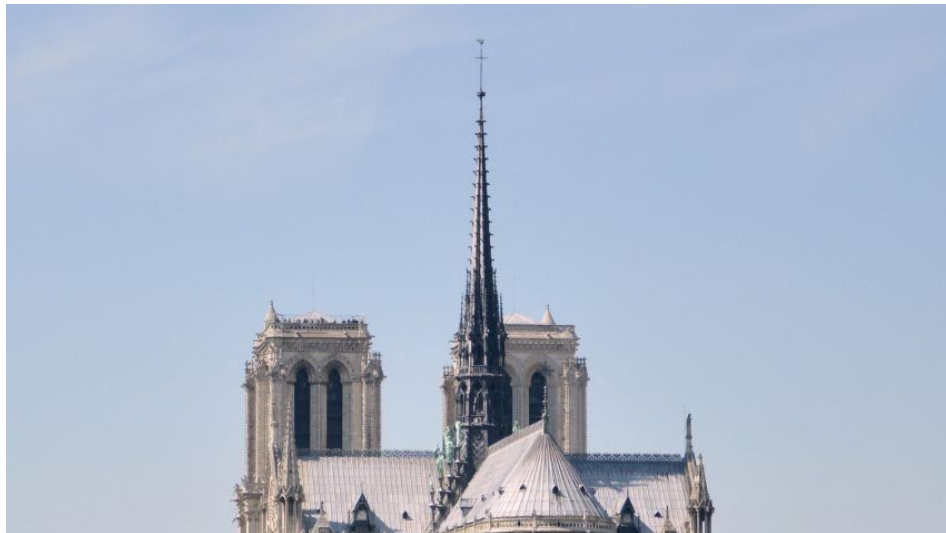

Very interesting. So if letters are just a type of number, and numbers describe the true nature of the matrix, what does that make WORDS?? Well, how do you make a word? You SPELL it. Yup, spelling is truly casting spells, the pen is mightier than the sword because it's MAGIC. You could look at it as a wand. This means all books are spellbooks.

Now, if these words are the codes, how do we transmit them? Speech. Each letter signifies a frequency, or specific sound that we make with our mouths. We replicate the exact frequency described by those symbols. These words, and the messages they contain could start wars, end marriages, bring peace. Better than that, when read, they force your brain to recreate those frequencies in your head. Sounds like magic to me.

Now I realize some of you at this point still don't truly understand how a 2d figure like a shape, letter or number could truly describe a frequency. Or that a frequency (or spoken word) could truly have a physical effect on the 3d world, luckily there's a good way to exemplify this concept. If you put salt on a metal surface and blast it with frequency, as the frequency of the music goes up, so does the complexity of the patterns formed in the salt.

Hmmmm, so by this logic, all MUSICians are actually MAGICians. They can create a set of frequencies that huge amounts of people will listen to over and over again. This influences people's thoughts. Music is the most viral, hypnotic, and powerful form of frequency to humans. This is the true reason religions, and those who run our pop culture utilize it. You can synchronize the intentions of huge groups of people. This is an interesting concept as well. If churches are places to gather the energy of the people, could that be why they are many times built with spires? This would essentially act as a huge human energy antennae.

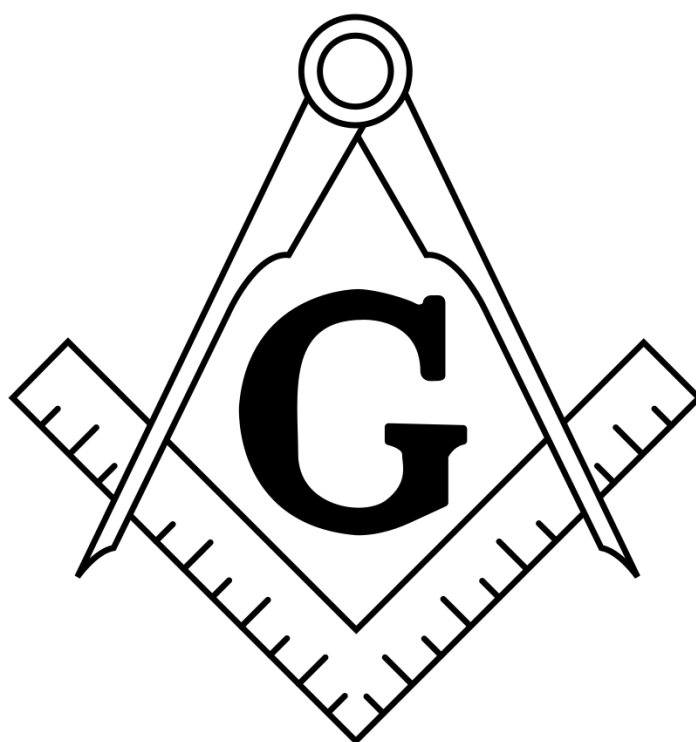

Very interesting, could human architecture actually hold much more significance than we give it credit for? Could buildings, and even whole cities be built to work with, amplify and harvest humanity's natural vibrational energy? Take for instance the internal structure of the infamous Twin Towers. Both had steel cores, as you can see in the pictures below. This would essentially make them gigantic tuning forks. It would also make them very hard to take down with an airplane (and collapse at free-fall speeds), but we'll talk about that later.

If buildings and other monuments are truly designed to harness, focus, and harvest energy, then architects are perhaps much more influential than we give them credit for. Have these builders truly had such a huge influence over the course of civilization? Well I can confirm at least one group of them did.

The Freemasons. The word “mason” is defined as “a builder and worker in stone” This is why their symbol is a square and compass, essential tools for designing blueprints. G is the 7th letter of the alphabet (7 is the number of knowledge) and specifically capital G is the 33rd letter (go to uppercase after the 26th letter Z, so $7+26=33$, the master teacher.) This group was formed in the 14th century and regulated the qualifications of stonemasons and their interactions with authorities and clients. They would go on to become one of the most important fraternal organizations in the history of mankind. Among their members, many of the founding fathers and leaders in the American Revolution. People such as George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, and James Monroe. The organization is widespread among all power structures in the western world, including the police force, intelligence agencies, and even the royal family.

Wow, so if the power of buildings, architecture and design were already contained to the discretion of the most elite of society as far back as the 14th century, is there evidence of this knowledge being used previous even to then? And if these patterns and designs are so powerful, are they being used in other important areas of modern design as well? I'll let this picture speak for itself:

In esoteric circles there is a saying “as above, so below”, in this duality ruled matrix everything is a reflection of everything else. The macro is at its core, the same as the micro, as shown here. It appears as if the same fundamental concepts of energy flow and electric transmission have been in practice long before man had ever conceived the digital.

Ok so now we know that all is energy, all levels of the Universe follow that same universal golden ratio, and therefore are all governed by numbers themselves. On the macro side we know that frequency can directly affect the physical world, we know the human brain is the most powerful sender and receiver of frequency in existence and that our cities, buildings and even ancient monuments are designed to amplify and harvest this energy.

So how in the heck do we tie all of this together?

This brings us to what's known as the "Schumann Resonance". In 1952, German physicist W.O. Schumann hypothesized there were measurable electromagnetic waves between the Earth's surface and ionosphere. The ionosphere is an abundant layer of electrons that is located 30 miles above the Earth's surface. This is the "celestial power station" that makes radio communication possible.

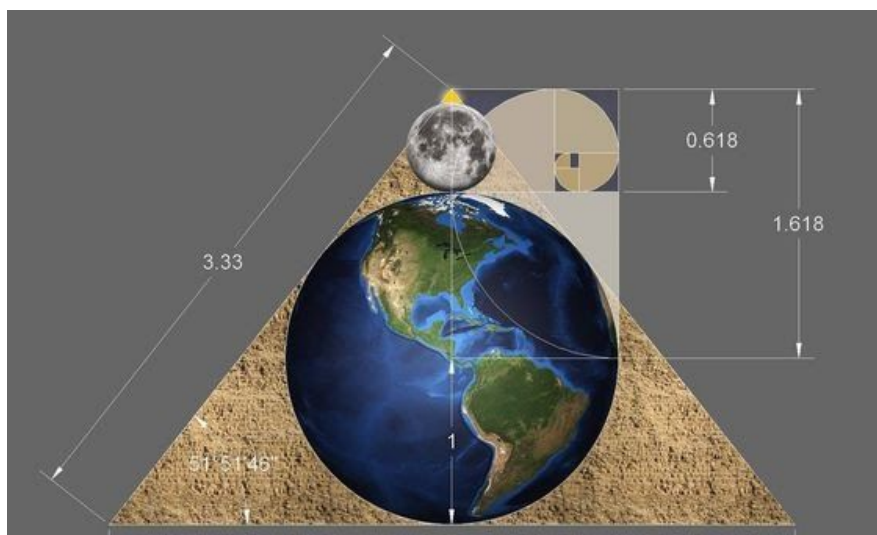

In 1954, Schumann found there was a main frequency of 7.83 hz present. Interesting, why is this frequency so special? Well as it turns out this frequency resonates with 432 ($4+3+2=9$, 9 is the number of God in Numerology, that's why it looks like the golden ratio) hz, which is a pure tone of math, fundamental to nature and vibrating with Phi, or as we call it: the Golden Ratio.

Woah, so Earth's natural frequency is just an energetic reflection of Fibonacci's constant?!?!? It seems so. This now connects back to architecture, remember how the Egyptians' Eye of Horus golden ratio symbol was used in their system of measurement?

Indeed, it has been found that a pyramid built based on Pi varies only by 0.1% from the Great Pyramid's dimensions. Well that's very interesting because you know what else the Pyramid's dimensions reflect? The very planet Earth itself. The pyramid was built to the Earth's dimensions at a 1/43200 scale.

This is interesting as the Greeks used the Golden Ratio to design rooms for perfect acoustics. Many cathedrals are also built to these proportions, as well as in music studios. For instance The Recording Institute of Detroit built a “Golden Section Studio” to phi proportions. Instruments such as the violin are also designed with this ratio in mind.

Ok, so now we know that the same ratio we learned governs all of the universe is also represented in this 432 hz or the 7.8 hz frequency that Schumann discovered is the Earth’s natural frequency. Why then, in 1917 did the American Federation of Musicians make it the standard to tune all instruments to 440 (4 is the number of law and order/control in numerology) hz instead? Well let’s see what the physical manifestations of these two frequencies look like compared to each other in water:

You can see that the 440 hz water forms a much less elegant and structured pattern. So if 440 hz does that to water, what does it do to humans (bodies are 67% water) who are now forced to listen to all music at this frequency?

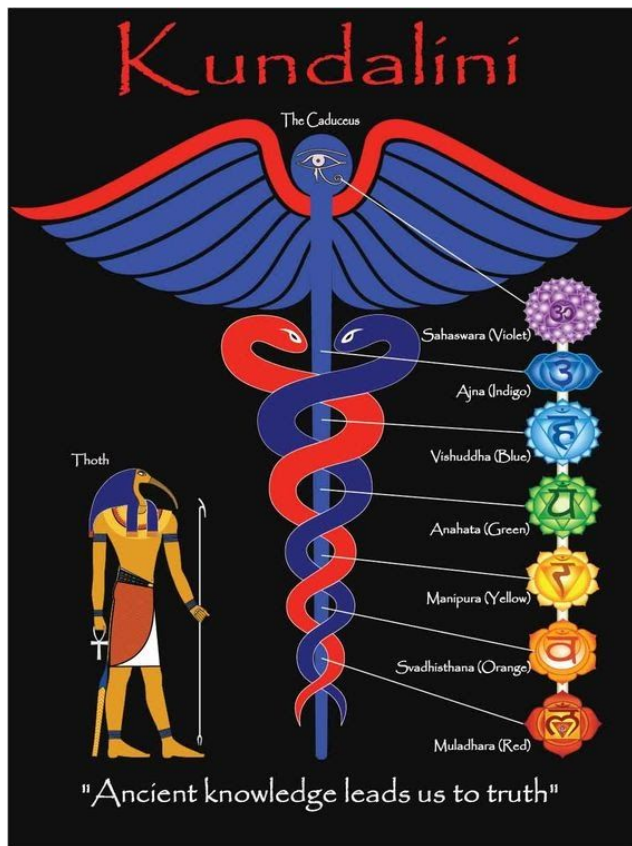

To answer that question we'll have to analyze the results of another experiment performed by German scientist Rutger Wever. His study involved putting perfectly healthy students into hermetically (remember Hermes?) sealed bunkers that screened out the Schumann frequency. The students suffered emotional distress, migraine headaches and their circadian rhythms changed. All of these things went right back to normal as soon as the Schumann resonance was pumped back in.

Why did this happen? Well it appears as if this frequency is the tuning fork of life. It acts as a background frequency influencing the biological circuitry of the mammalian brain (the subconscious brain below the neocortex, home of the autonomic nervous system). So could the switch to a 440 hz standard be a full on acoustic, and therefore energetic assault on humanity? It appears so.

Could there be an unseen energetic war going on for the coherence of human minds, consciousness and therefore the matrix itself? This 7.83

($7+8+3=18/1+8=9$, BTW) hz frequency seems to be the Earth's electromagnetic heartbeat. Ancient Indian culture referred to it as "OM" or pure sound. This same frequency is also extremely powerful when used to influence brainwaves. It is associated with with low levels of alpha and the upper range of theta brain-wave states. It is the range of the brain that allows us to access the subconscious, and therefore higher degrees of suggestibility, meditation and cerebral blood flows. So it seems that this frequency is what connects not only all of creation, but the human mind to the energy of the very Earth itself.

This brings us back to what we covered in section 1 once again. In this experiment, by disrupted the brain's access to the Schumann resonance, the students brains begin to malfunction. Could this be because our pineal gland is simply a receiver, using our unique DNA (which bares a striking resemblance to the snakes on Hermes staff) to tune in our individual egos? Is this why meditation, and balancing your body's energy centers along your spine (aether antenna) results in such clarity and peace? Does this mean the Ionosphere IS the aether itself??

If there was a war going on, how could we tell? Are there ways to measure changes in this field? Do certain events and activities affect it?

This brings us back to September 11th 2001. When those two towers came down, it was broadcasted live around the world. All of humanity was struck with fear, grief and hatred. At this time, scientists at the Princeton University were running their “Global Consciousness Project” and were collecting data via the internet from devices all around the world. The data they collected indicated that there was a dramatic change in the Earth’s magnetic field caused presumably by the collective emotional response of humanity.

Now on the flip side of this concept, studies have also been done to measure the effects that mass meditation efforts have on human society, crime, and violence. One particular study was performed in 1983 when a group of meditators came to Jerusalem to exemplify the “radiating influence of peace.” This group meditated daily, and over 2 months the data collected showed a 76% reduction of war deaths, reduced crime rates and decreased traffic accidents.

Is this struggle still occurring today? Has there been any interesting, fluctuations recorded? Let’s take a look at what happened just last year, on November the 11th, 2018, or put another way: 11/11/11(=2+0+1+8).

An aerial view of Mayotte's South Island.

PHOTOGRAPH BY HEMIS / ALAMY STOCK PHOTO

| SCIENCE & INNOVATION |

Strange waves rippled around the world, and nobody knows why

At 9:30am UT, roughly 15 miles off the coast of Africa, there erupted a series of waves that rang for more than 20 minutes. These waves were highly irregular, so much so that Ph.D. candidate Helen Robinson described them as “Too perfect to be nature”. Interesting, was this another possible energetic act of war? And by who?

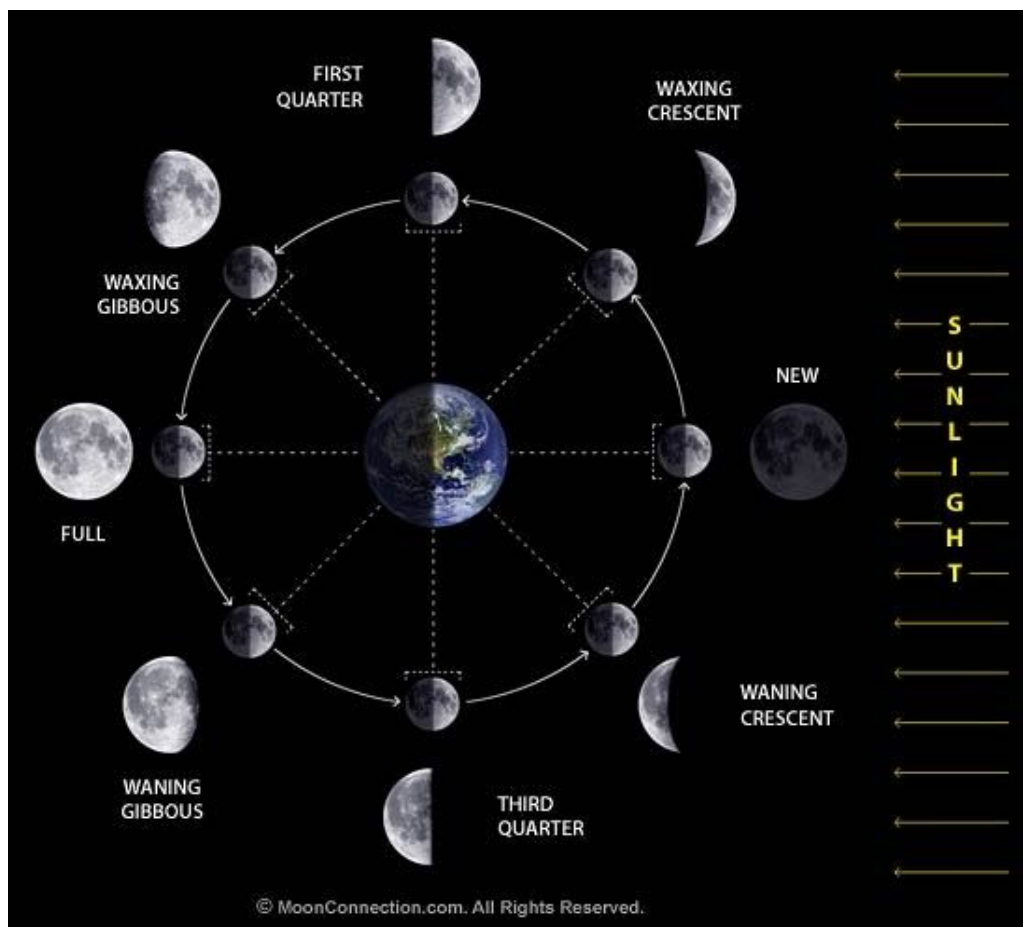

Hmmm, so all of this is very interesting. Are there any other factors that affect this mass human consciousness energy field? We know that the Earth's magnetic field acts as a shield from harmful rays and particles from outside of our atmosphere. Are there any forces that do end up affecting life on Earth?

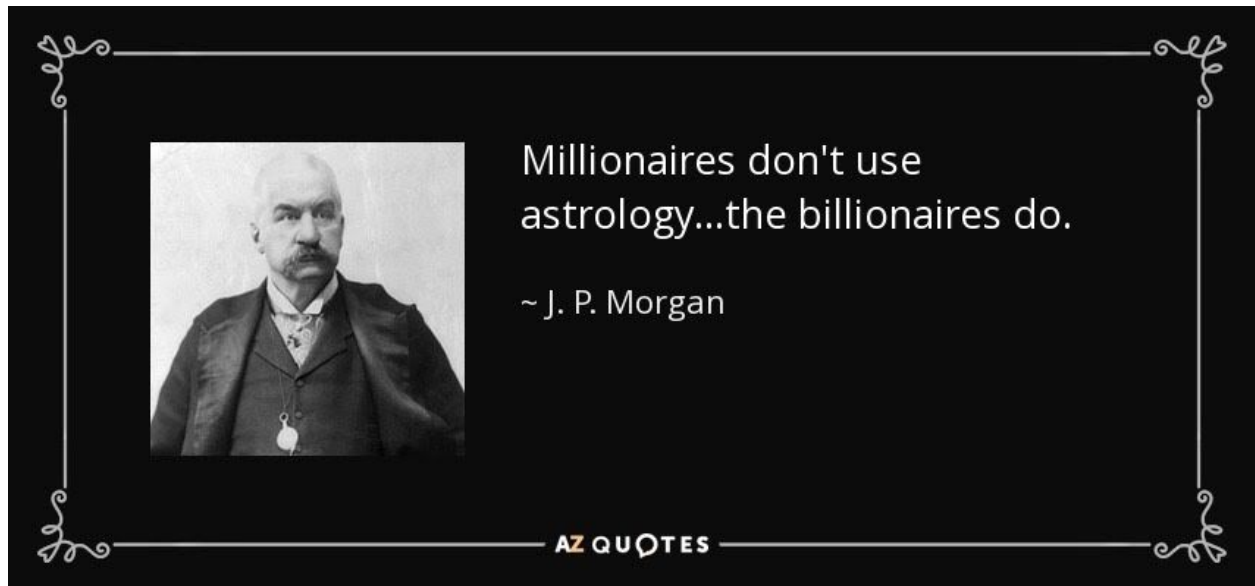

Mass coronal ejections from the sun occur about every 11 years, when these happen, the Earth's core gets heated up, and the change in density results in changes in the planet's electromagnetic field. In 1915 a Russian boy, Alexander Chizhevsky started comparing the Earth's solar cycles to the history of human conflict. He determined that 80% of countries most significant events occurred during solar activity. It appears as if these energy bursts from the sun also carry information, interacts directly with the consciousness of earth. By the way, we are currently in one of these eras of solar activity.

So what other external factors do we know influence things here on Earth? Well the most obviously, the moon. It is well known that the moon's gravity controls the tides of Earth's oceans, what else does it do? Well turns out the mythos of the "werewolf" is actually steeped in the scientific reality of a full moon. While people may not actually be transforming into wolf creatures, there are significant statistical anomalies that exist based on the lunar cycle. Take for instance the female menstruation cycle, which unlike other mammals, happens on an approximately monthly basis. Other irregularities include increased crime rates. The University of Washington did a study in 1978 concluding that out of 11,613 cases of aggravated assault in a 5 year period, assaults occurred more often around the full moon, and 34,318 crimes in a yearlong period also showed that crimes occurred more frequently during the full moon.

With all this talk of celestial bodies, solar and lunar cycles and their direct effects on human behavior, consciousness, and body function, you may be starting to realize the basis on which another ancient mystical science operates.

Astrology.

While the modern day, western concept of astrology has been commercialized, altered and generally associated with superstition and pseudoscience, many cultures take it VERY seriously. So what is all of this based on? Given what we know about energy cycles and extraterrestrial bodies' effects on the Earth's energy, what connections can we draw?

Well at it's very core, Astrology measures, records and predicts stages of our planet's movement in space, it's relation to other planets (and therefore their gravitational pull) and the effects these things have.

Cultures all over the world have tracked the Earth's travel through the galaxy relative to other celestial objects. Civilizations such as the Chinese, the Babylonians (who brought it to Greece and Egypt) and on the other side of the world: the Mayans.

You may be familiar with the famed “Mayan Calendar” which had doomsday preppers losing their minds in 2012. So why DID the Mayan calendar end in 2012? What exactly was it recording and what does it mean for us? Well most likely it was simply detailing the Earth’s roughly 12,960 year cycle that brings us into direct alignment with the center of the Milky Way galaxy. So how does this cycle ACTUALLY affect the Earth? Namely, through altering the planet’s degree of tilt on its axis. This is caused by the different gravitational pulls of celestial objects (like other planets) due to new angles of relation in the solar system.

So what direct effects does this change in tilt have on the Earth? Well it has to do with the most powerful energetic features of the planet: it's poles. Yup, every 13,000 years or so the Earth's poles completely switch places. What effects does this have on Earth climate, sea levels and landmass? Well roughly 12,000 years ago marked the end of the last ice age. So where does that leave us now?

NATURE

Earth's Magnetic North Pole Has Shifted So Much We've Had to Update GPS

SARAH KAPLAN, THE WASHINGTON POST
6 FEB 2019

Magnetic north is not where it used to be.

Since 2015, the place to which a compass points has been sprinting toward Siberia at a pace of more than 30 miles (48 kilometres) a year. And this week, after a delay caused by the month-long partial government shutdown in the United States, humans have finally caught up.

While it used to be considered a wild conspiracy theory, we have now been forced to update the GPS system to account for the rapidly moving north pole. It's moving at nearly 30 miles a year towards Siberia. How could this affect Earth? Will the effects mirror those on 12,000 years ago? Are we already starting to see them now?

Modern astrologers will tell you that we have recently entered into the “Age of Aquarius”, or as some refer to it: “the age of awakening”. An astrological age is a period based off of the 2,150 years it takes for the vernal equinox to travel from one constellation of the zodiac to the next.

In this section we have learned that all is energy, information, and therefore numbers. We’ve learned that all structures in the Universe follow the same golden ratio (as does the human mind), we’ve found that that ratio is also present in the Earth’s magnetic field and that that field is essential for the stability of human consciousness. We also considered the possibility of an energetic war going on for control of this mass human conscious, what can disrupt it, and how it changes over time. We then discussed what the ancients knew about these cycles and secrets.

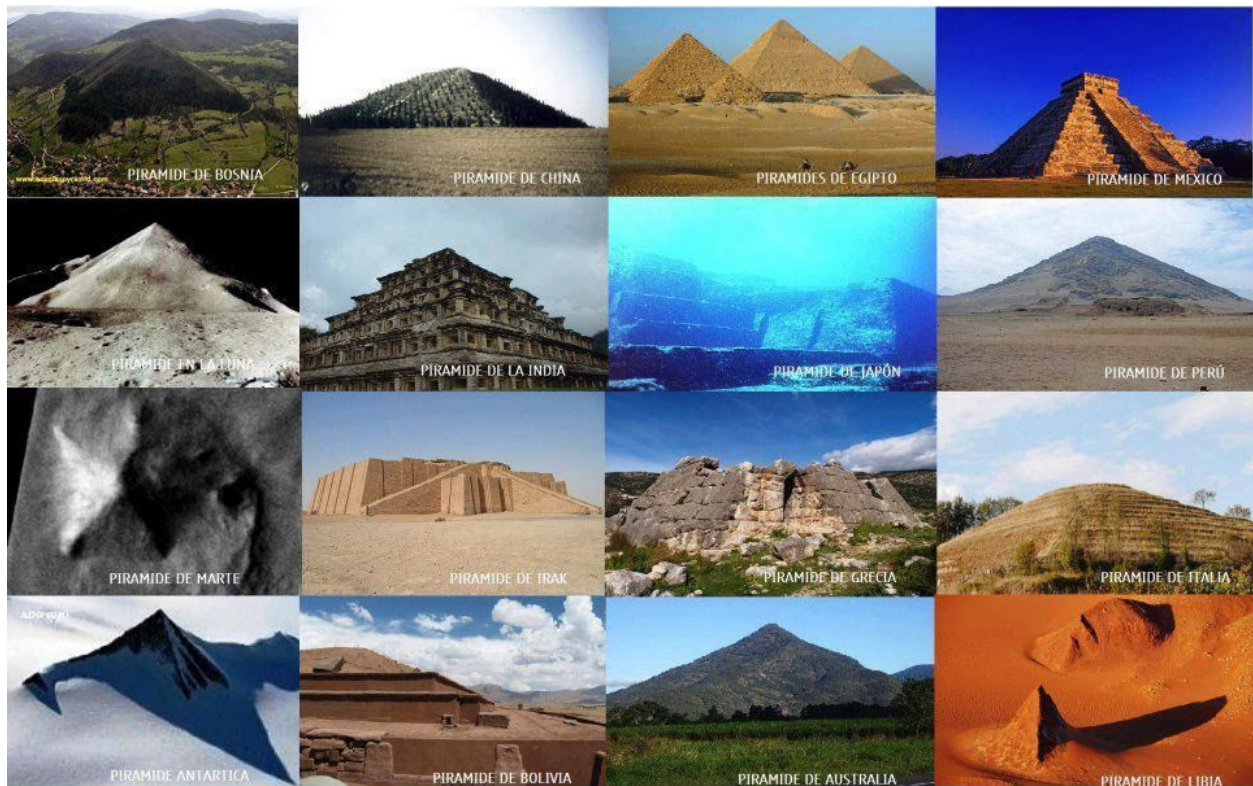

The deeper we dive into the groundbreaking new age fields of quantum physics and Nikola Tesla's energetic universe, the more we start to see evidence that ancient human civilization not only had knowledge of these concepts, but may have been utilizing them better than we have.

It seems that mankind has not been on a steady slope of advancement and improvement, but rather a cycle of levels of consciousness. If indeed these ancient civilizations had knowledge of the golden ratio, the Earth's magnetic field, and its relation to human consciousness, what else have we seemingly forgotten? Are we truly a species with amnesia?

For the answers to those questions, we will have to dive into our next section:
"Humanity's Hidden History"

Section III: Humanity's Hidden History

Ok, so obviously there's a few holes in our mainstream historical narrative. How could these ancient civilizations move 200 ton stone blocks, precision cut them, and then assemble skyscraper height monuments without modern machinery? Well the funny thing is, we can't replicate these structures even WITH modern machinery. We don't have a crane big or strong enough to lay the stones of the great pyramid.

This is just the monuments in Egypt, there are other ancient megaliths all around the world that we can't quite explain. Take for instance the stone walls in Peru, belonging to the ancient Incan city of Cuzco. These gigantic stone walls were seemingly molded together, and fit perfectly into place somehow. To the point that you cannot even fit a razor blade between them. This exact, precise construction has allowed these walls to survive thousands of years of earthquakes and other natural challenges.

So how did these ancient cultures move, cut and assemble these stones into gigantic structures that have stood the tests of time through the millenia? What information and sciences were they aware of, did they know things about energy that we don't? Why did so many completely separate cultures build pyramids of such similar design? Where could we look for clues?

Well, luckily for us, we've already determined that Earth has a magnetic field surrounding it that protects all life and is critical to the stability of human consciousness. What we didn't cover in the last section was what this field actually looks like.

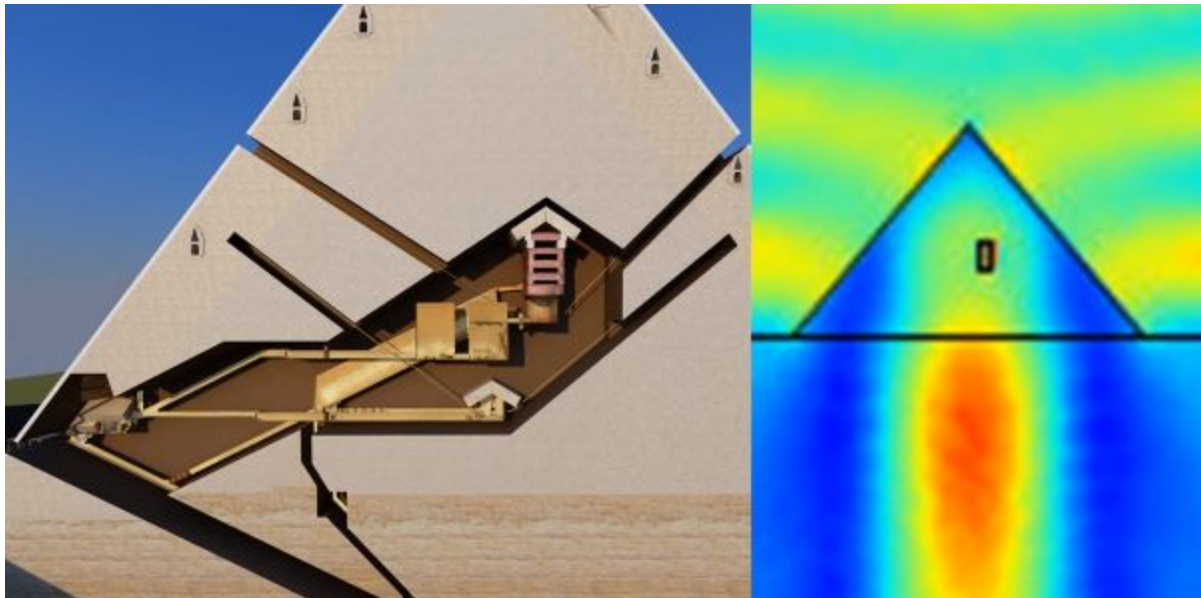

The picture above shows what's referred to as "ley lines" These ley lines are the fault lines in the Earth's crust. Through these faults erupts massive magnetic energy. This creates a grid of high energy lines and nodes that represent the Earth's electromagnetic field. This is interesting, what power can be accessed at these points? What civilizations have known about these lines? How have they taken advantage of them? What have they built and why?

Well would you look at that? It seems like ancient megalithic structures in every corner of earth are built along these energetic lines. Very interesting. Now, what exactly is the point of all of this? What does building big stone structures at these points do?? For that question, let's check out what's recently been discovered at the Giza plateau.

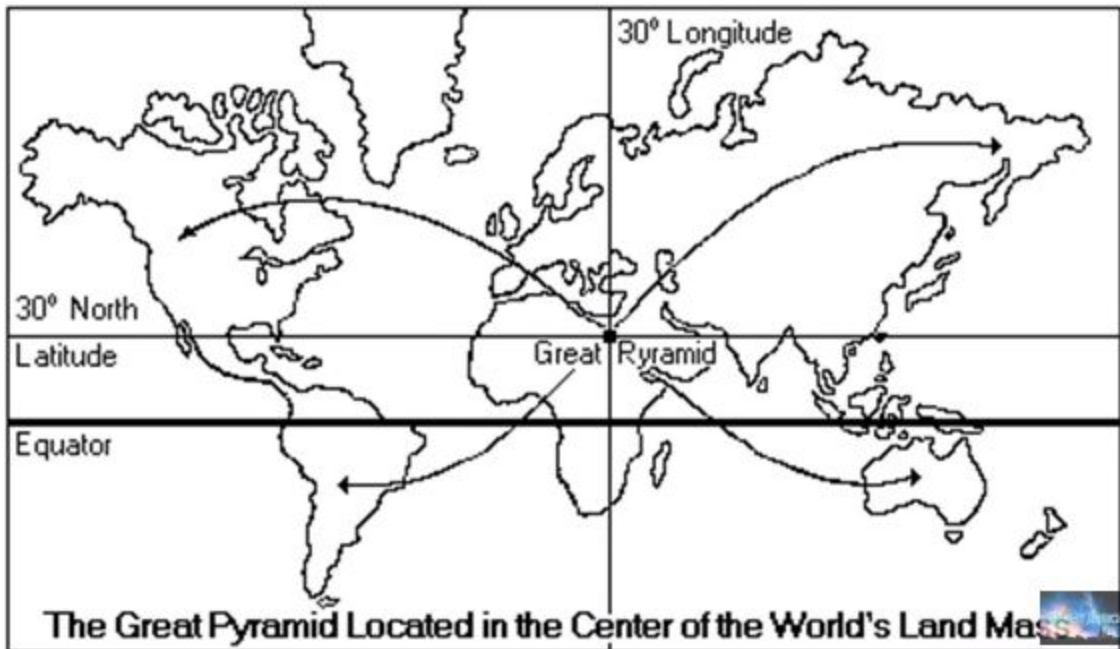

So what exactly do we know about these Egyptian pyramids? According to mainstream science, they were simply used as burial tombs. There are some facts that seem to contradict this conclusion. Take for instance, that no mummies have ever been found there. Also, unlike tombs of pharaohs at the valley of the kings, there are 0 hieroglyphs anywhere inside of the structures. The there is the internal features themselves. Mainly defined by two chambers connected by narrow shafts (stairs had to be built to travel between them, they seemingly were not intended for humans to walk in). These chambers also happen to have extraordinary acoustics. Acoustics? As in sound? As in frequency, vibration, ENERGY??

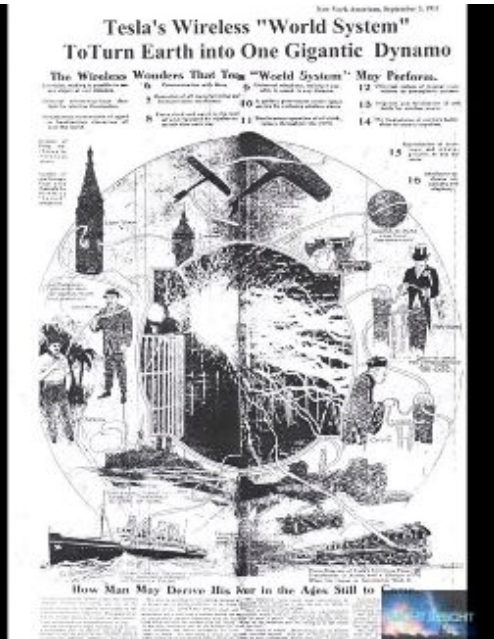

Yup, it appears as if the pyramids have the ability to harness and focus electromagnetic energy at their base and in their chambers.

Hmmmm, could this have something to do with these ley lines that represent the Earth's natural energy field? Well let's check out where the Giza plateau is located?

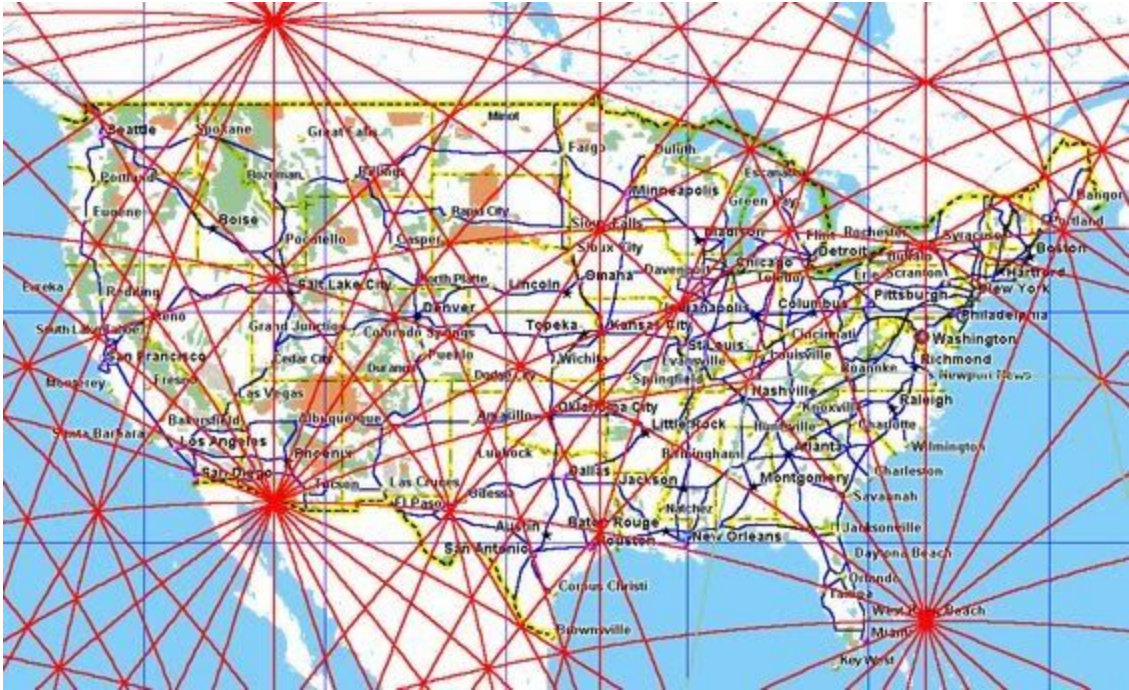

WELL WOULD YOU LOOK AT THAT. Looks like the Giza plateau lies at the the exact center of the Earth's landmass, and of course lays directly at these lay lines. Ok, so it appears as if these structures were harnessing the natural energy of Earth for some reason. Has anyone in modern history figured this out? Yeah, you guessed it, back to Tesla!

Tesla's energy tower. He claimed that this system would harness the natural energy of Earth and be able to transmit it wirelessly around the world for free. So what connects this tower to the ancient Egyptian pyramids? Well, take for instance, the fact that both were built on top of aquifers, seemingly using water to help harness energy.

Intriguing, are there any more similarities between these two structures? You guessed it! Tesla built his tower on a ley line as well, seemingly tapping into this same energy field!

Ok, so let's review a bit: the great pyramids are built on ley lines, and have been shown to focus electromagnetic energy like Tesla's wireless energy power. Both are tapping into the Earth's magnetic field or Schumann resonance frequency. We also know that human minds are seemingly connected to this energy field as well as they go crazy when cut off. We also know that it is the pineal gland that connects the human brain to this mass consciousness field that Nikola Tesla called the aether. Could it be that these structures are not only for energy generation, but to influence this mass human, third eye/pineal gland related consciousness as well? Could that be what this symbol means?

So this would imply that accessing this energy field would not only be for energy harvesting, but for information transmission as well. Influencing, and controlling the operation of all the minds connected to the 7.83 hz frequency of this field.

If so, it could explain why this symbol, referred to as the “Eye of Providence” has been so popular among powerful groups such as the Freemasons, the founding fathers, and even DARPA (the office responsible for creating another mass human information network:the internet).

These groups explain this symbol as exemplifying not only the trinity (of God/the aether/5d as covered earlier) but also the watchful eye of God over the world. The mason’s referred to this God as the “Great Architect of the Universe.” Now what if this organization of Elite architects believed they WERE this great architect and were manipulating all of humanity using their hidden knowledge? I guess it’s possible, let’s keep digging.

How do we know for sure that these structures had any kind of data or communications/transmission capability? Well for one thing, Tesla originally got JP Morgan to finance his tower project by telling him it was an advanced version of his radio. When Morgan found out it would create free wireless energy and disrupt the Oil monopoly, he immediately withdrew funding. Now what did Tesla work on next? Well, he packed up shop in New York and headed out to Colorado Springs to work on a new project. You know what's interesting about Colorado? It's state seal not only features the "Eye of Providence", but its state motto is also "Nothing without providence" or "Nothing without the Deity"

Well that's pretty curious, no? That Tesla would decide to pick up shop and move far out west to a midland state that just happens to feature the all seeing eye in its seal? Well maybe not.

So what was Tesla up to at this lab. Well among other things, he was working on a more advanced communication system. Given that his lab was located directly on top of one of these much talked about electromagnetic gridlines, it wouldn't be a stretch to say that he was tapping directly into the aether itself. Given that the aether is an omnipresent, all encompassing 5d energy field, it would go to reason that a communication network built on it could provide instant communication across VAST distances, like even say, astronomical ones ;)

Yup, Nikola Tesla claimed to be in contact with extraterrestrials (from Mars he claimed) at his Colorado Springs lab. It appears by tapping into the Earth's electromagnetic field at these ley lines, he was able to tap into a vast communication network and talk to beings from other worlds. Now this is interesting of course, but how does it tie back to the pyramids of egypt? Well there are actually even more curious facts regarding their construction than we have covered previously.

The Giza Pyramids are actually aligned perfectly with a belt of stars known as Orion's Belt. Ok, so if Tesla's tower was communicating with ETs from mars, is it possible the pyramids were built based on the same principles, except at a MUCH larger scale, in a much more precise manner, in order to target and communicate with groups MUCH farther away? Like say, in a galaxy (to steal a popular phrase) far, far away? Hmmm, now why would an ancient human civilization want to contact such a specific set of stars? Especially given the huge undertaking it must have been to construct, who were they so anxious to connect with? Is it perhaps possible that it wasn't humans who built them at all? Is it possible that it was a case (to steal yet another popular phrase) of an ET "phoning home"?

This would have a lot of broad implications. Was ancient humanity influenced by extraterrestrial influences? Was ancient culture shaped by these beings? Do these cultures leave us any clues in their artwork and records? Are these influences still present some ways in the major religions of the modern day? For these questions, we'll have to take a look at one of the first human civilizations, the Sumerians.

The Sumerians are widely considered the earliest known human civilization (they're not but we'll get to that) and they lived nearly 6,000 years ago. The being pictured is called the “Annunaki” or “from the sky to earth came”. Notice the pattern on the gift he’s presenting? Yeah, shit just gets wilder from here.

Ok, so who were the Sumerians? Well, their clay tablets left behind are our first evidence of human written language, science, mathematics, war, and religion. Located in southern Iraq, the area has traditionally been of interest to the west as the location of the mythical “Garden of Eden.”

In 1849, 20,000 of Sumerian cuneiforms were found in the ancient cities of Sippar and Nippur, about a dozen of them were about the Garden of Eden.

In 1922, biblical scholar and early archaeologist, C. Leonard Woolley explored this area. What he discovered was the ancient Sumerian city of Ur. The location of the ancient megalithic structure above, known as the “Ziggurat.”

So what did these tablets say? Well recently they have been translated by modern archaeologists, and it tells a very different story than what we’ve been in Abrahamic religions. Traditionally, we’ve been taught that humanity was kicked out of “paradise” for the sin of seeking forbidden knowledge. The Sumerian’s tell a different story. In their version, humanity was seen as beasts of burden for the gods. In fact, the Greek root of the word “paradise” translates to an enclosed park for animals, like a zoo or farm. This paints a very different story indeed. If this first civilization claims that humans were just beasts of burden for the gods, who were these gods? Where did modern humanity itself come from?

[Middle English paradis, from Old French, from Late Latin paradīsus, from Greek paradeisos, garden, enclosed park, paradise, from Avestan pairidaēza-, enclosure, park : pairi-, around; see per in Indo-European roots + daēza-, wall; see dheigh- in Indo-European roots.]

par'a·di·si'a·cal (-dī-sī'ə-kəl, -zī'-), par'a·di·si'ac (-äk), par'a·di·sa'i·cal (-dī-sā'ī-kəl, -zā'-), par'a·di·sa'ic (-īk), par'a·dis'al (-dī'səl, -zəl) adj.

This takes us to the next part of the Genesis story. The creation of man. In the bible, the first man was named Adam. What is the root of this word?

BM 74329, line 5: “[From the place] of their work, they [the gods associated with Tiamat] gave birth to the wild beasts [the Á-DAM: animals?]...”

BM 74329, lines 9-10: “‘Come and let me love you.’ The wild beasts [Á-DAM?] married the Earth-mother... Absolute power was taken over...”

Gen. 1:26: Elohim created Adam (the earthy one).

Gen. 1:28: “Be fruitful [Adam and woman], and multiply, and fill the earth, and subdue it...”

Again, it is a Sumerian word meaning animal. So what else do the Sumerian tablets say about this creation story? It says that humanity was created as slaves, but then there was a disagreement among the gods Enki and Enlil. Enki is described as a serpent like humanoid, and unlike Enlil, he believes that humanity deserves to obtain the secret knowledge of the gods. Could this conflict be the origin of the serpent in garden offering the forbidden fruit?

If this is true, in what way would Enki gift humanity with this knowledge and power? Well let's look at the gifts these beings seem to be offering in the Sumerian hieroglyphs.

Yup, there's that all too familiar pinecone pattern. Could these Annunaki have genetically modified the existing primate species on earth into our modern species? Did they do this by gifting us with this pineal gland that we covered earlier that connects us to the infinite knowledge source known as the "aether" as described by Nikola Tesla?

Well the tablets seem to support that idea, and indeed, there is evidence that our 2nd chromosome seems to have been modified in a way that evolution can't explain. This chromosome is the same one that influences the development of our brain in the ways that makes us unique from other primate species.

So the Enki guy (who was the trickster god of wisdom), doesn't seem so bad. It seems like all he wanted to do was give humanity a chance to be free. So why is he portrayed as Satan in the Bible's Genesis story? Well we need to again take a look at the root of the word. In Sumerian, the word "satam" simply means "administrator", and Enki was the entity that the gods used to manage the human slave population. Is it possible that our modern concepts of God and Satan have been flipped? Was the ancient God of the bible in fact a slave master, and the entity of Satan, a liberator? It certainly seems possible.

So what other proof is there that these ancient gods were extraterrestrials with advanced knowledge? Well above is yet another ancient tablet, where our solar system was accurately portrayed as planets rotating around the sun. This knowledge wouldn't be discovered in our culture for another 5 millennia (thanks Copernicus), and yet they seem to have known it then. They also seem to consistently show 7 dots. This is interesting as if you were to visit earth from outside the solar system, you would have to pass 7 planets on the way here.

So what other advanced knowledge did this civilization seemingly obtain all at once? Well few people realize that not only did the Sumerians create the first human written language, but also the lunar month calendar that we use today, agriculture, maps, instruments and most importantly, our 12/60 based mathematical system.

Let's review. In Numerology, 6 is the number of time. This follows as there are:

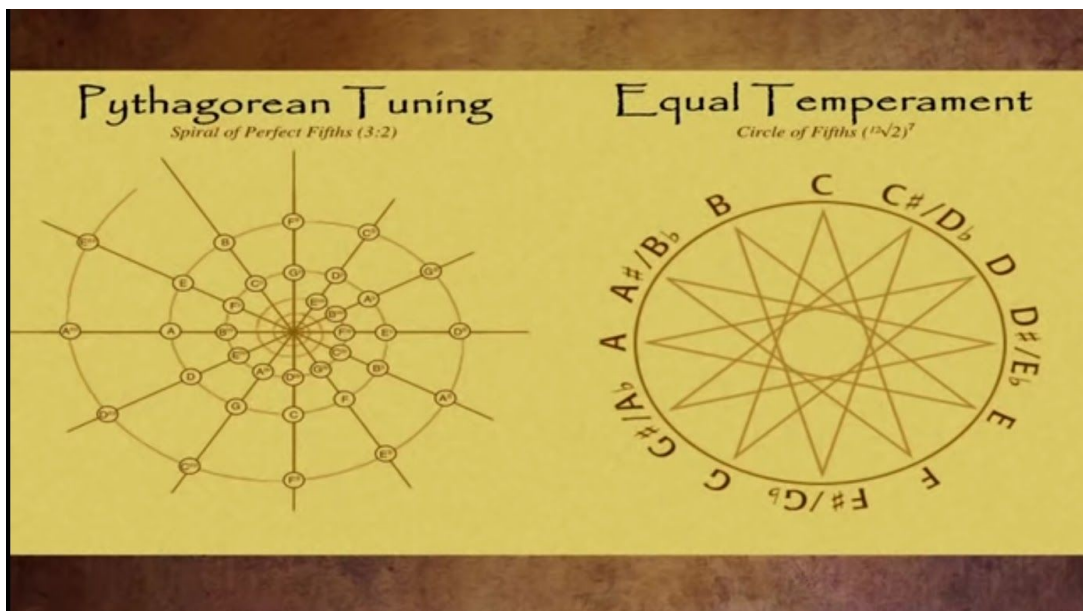

6(0) seconds in a minute, 6(0) minutes in an hour, 24 (2+4=6) hours in a day, 7 days in a week ($7 \times 24 = 168$, $1+6+8=15$, $1+5=6$).

Then we have 12.

12 months in a year, 12 astrological signs, 12 disciples of Jesus.

How does this tie back to what we've learned earlier about the ties between numbers, geometry, 3d objects, frequency and ultimately a universal language of the universe?

Well last fast forward in history and see what we can find. In the 6th century B.C. we find the Greek philosopher Pythagoras. Yes, the same one behind the Pythagorean theorem that our concepts of geometry are based on. How did he find this secret to the Universe? Through sound, harmonics. He found that when a string was plucked it would create a tone, and when cut in half would make a tone twice as high in pitch. This lead to the creation of the modern musical scale, and they were all found using mathematics.

By using harmonic fifths, Pythagoras was lead from note 1 to note 27. To find the same note twice as high in pitch, he continued to double it.

54, 108, 216, and..... 432.

Remember that that tone?

This number is interesting because this is the same tone that many ancient instruments were tuned to. This includes native american flutes and tibetan bowls, which both vibrate at 432 cycles per second.

Ok, so let's take a look at Pythagoras's other passion, geometry. The internal angles of the most basic shapes show a very familiar pattern.

Triangle: 180 ($1+8=0=9$)

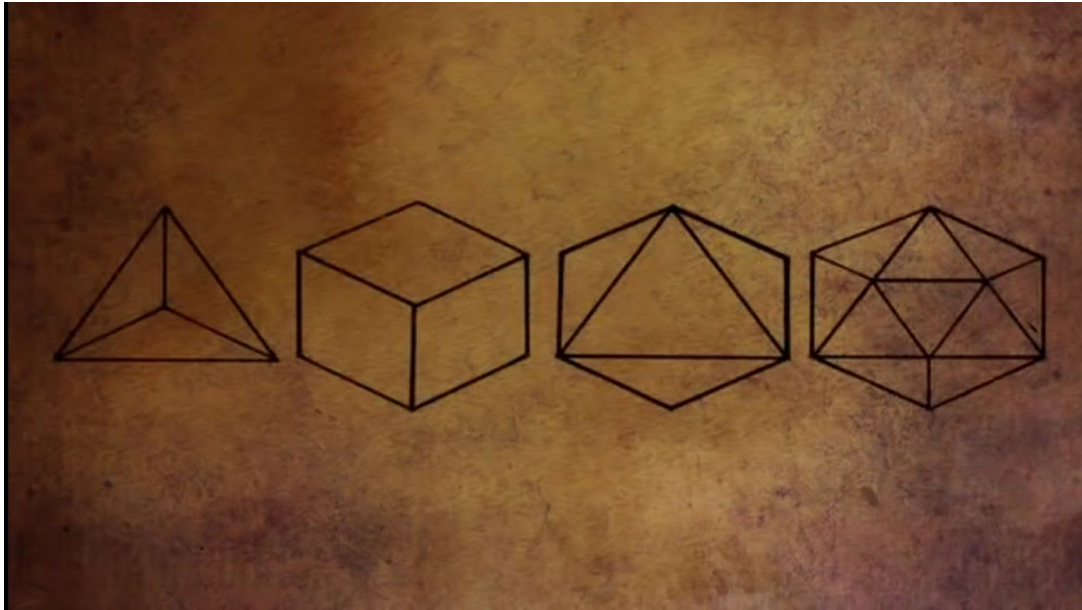

Circle/Square: 360 ($3+6+0=9$)

Pentagon: 540 ($5+4+0=9$)

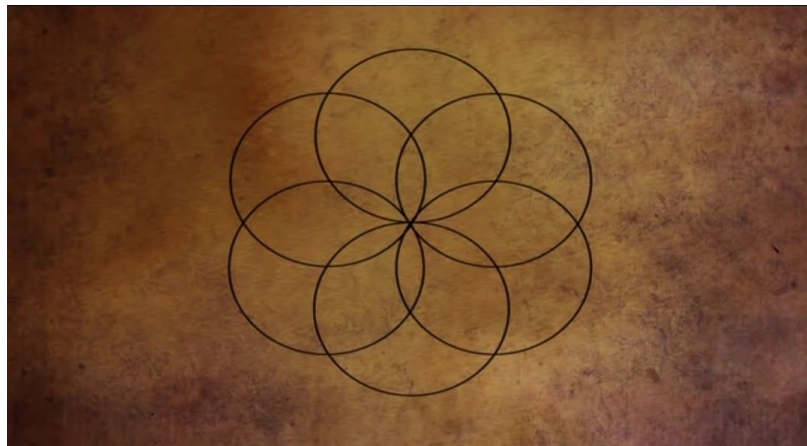

These internal angles as tones are F# and it's perfect harmonic fifth of C#. A hexagon is 720 ($7+2+0=9$), and a Septagon (or heptagon) is 900 ($9+0+0=9$), which is an A#. This is interesting as together, these tones form a perfect 3 part harmony of a F# major cord. Again we see the link between frequency and the makeup of the physical world, all made in the image of 9, God itself. Plato saw this and took the concept to the 3d.

Above are the platonic solids, again, all of their internal angles ultimately equal 9. Again, together they form yet another #F major chord. Ok so 2d and 3d geometry shows the same universal 9 pattern. So let's see if this holds true in sacred geometry as well.

In this symbol, we see that the 6 circles add up to 2160 ($2+1+6+0=9$) Now where have we seen this symbol before?

On the same hand as the pine cone gift, is what looks like a watch with the sacred geometry tree of life symbol. What other ancient cultures use this pattern in their architecture? Well basically all of them, from China, to Bulgaria, to Scotland, and so on and so forth around the world.

Ok let's just fly through some other fun facts about this 432(9) magic god number:

- Speed of light = 432^2 (the only whole number when squared that is within .01% accuracy of this speed)
- The Mayans measured our astrological ages as taking 25,920 years, they called it a great year. The digits add to 18/9. 25,920 divided by 60 equals 432.
- The moon is 2160 miles across (half of 432 minus the zero, equals 9)
- The sun is 864,000 miles across (double of 432 minus the zeros, digits equal 18 or 9)
- There are 432,000 seconds for the 12 hours of day, and 432,000 seconds for the 12 hours of night.

We also have the number 12 of the base 12/60 system. Squared it equals 144.

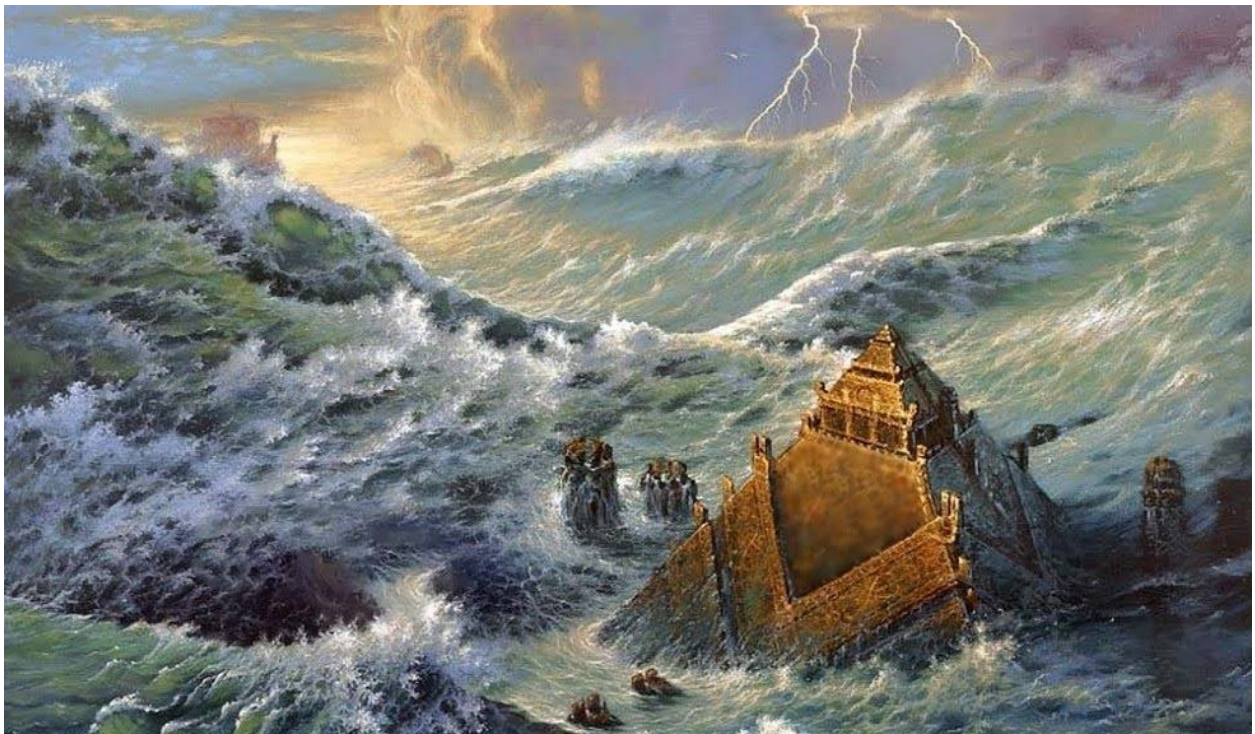

This number also appears very important.

- Ancient India divides our ages into "Kali Yugas" that take 144,000 years.
- The great pyramid of Giza was covered with 144,000 white casing stones.
- Ancient Mayans have 144,000 day "baktuns", this cycle has recently reset.
- Back to the Freemasons, could their obsession with 13 and 33 also be related to these numbers? If you divide 144,000 by 432 you get 333.333.

- Looking at the symbols on the back of the dollar bill, not only do we find a flower of life, but we also find a pyramid with 13 steps, multiplied by $33.3 = 432.9$ ($4+3+2+9=18/1+8=9$).

Ok, I think that's pretty much all the 432 stuff, for now, haha. Let's now move onto another Sumerian/Abrahamic shared "myth" that has broad implications that include even older human civilization that the one we just covered. The legend of the great flood.

While I'm sure many of us are familiar with the biblical story of Noah and the ark, but much like with the Garden of Eden, many are unfamiliar with the evidence of the factual event. The story goes that Noah was warned by God of a coming flood, so he collected 2 of every animal and built an ark to survive the cataclysm. In this way the earth's land was repopulated with life. This story again has roots in the Summerian mythological record as well.

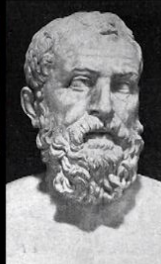

Ok, well if such a global event like that did happen, there should once again be evidence of such in other cultures around the world. Let's go back to 428 BC to visit our friend Plato once again.

Is the house of history built on foundations of sand? | Graham Hancock | TEDxReading

Plato:
428-348 BC

Source: The story of Atlantis was related to Plato's ancestor Solon by priests of the Temple of Neith at Sais in the Delta.

Solon:
638-558 BC

Approximate date of Solon's visit to Egypt: 600 BC.

Solon asked the Egyptian priests WHEN Atlantis "was swallowed up by the sea and vanished"?

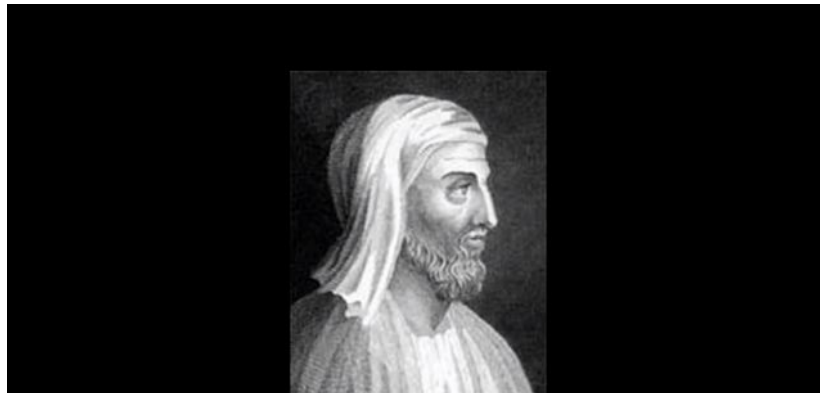

The priests replied – "nine thousand years ago".

"Nine thousand years ago" in 600 BC allows us to put quite a precise date on the submergence of Atlantis – in our calendar it's 9600 BC, i.e. 11,600 years ago.

Not only did Plato complete transform our understanding of geometry with his Platonic solids, but he also gave us our historical account of the mythical city of Atlantis.

This story was passed down for 6th generations in Plato's family from his ancestor Solon. Solon himself lived around 2,600 years ago, it was then when he visited the city of Sais in Egypt. He came searching wisdom as Egypt had the oldest recorded historical accounts at the time. Here he interacted with one Sonchis of Sais, who read him an account of Atlantis inscribed on the walls of the temple there.

Sonchis of Sais. Sonchis of Sais or the Saite (Greek: Σώγχις ὁ Σαΐτης, Sōnkhis o Saītēs; fl. 594 BC) was an Egyptian priest who is mentioned in Greek writings as relating the account of Atlantis. His status as a historical figure is a matter of debate.

These legends described the city in detail, with 3 rings of water and 2 of land. It was described as the capital of a great advanced Atlantian empire, including 10 cities ruled by the 10 descendents of Poesiden. Egypt was said to have been one of these colonies. All of this information was finally written down in Plato's Critias and Timaeus dialogues almost 200 years later.

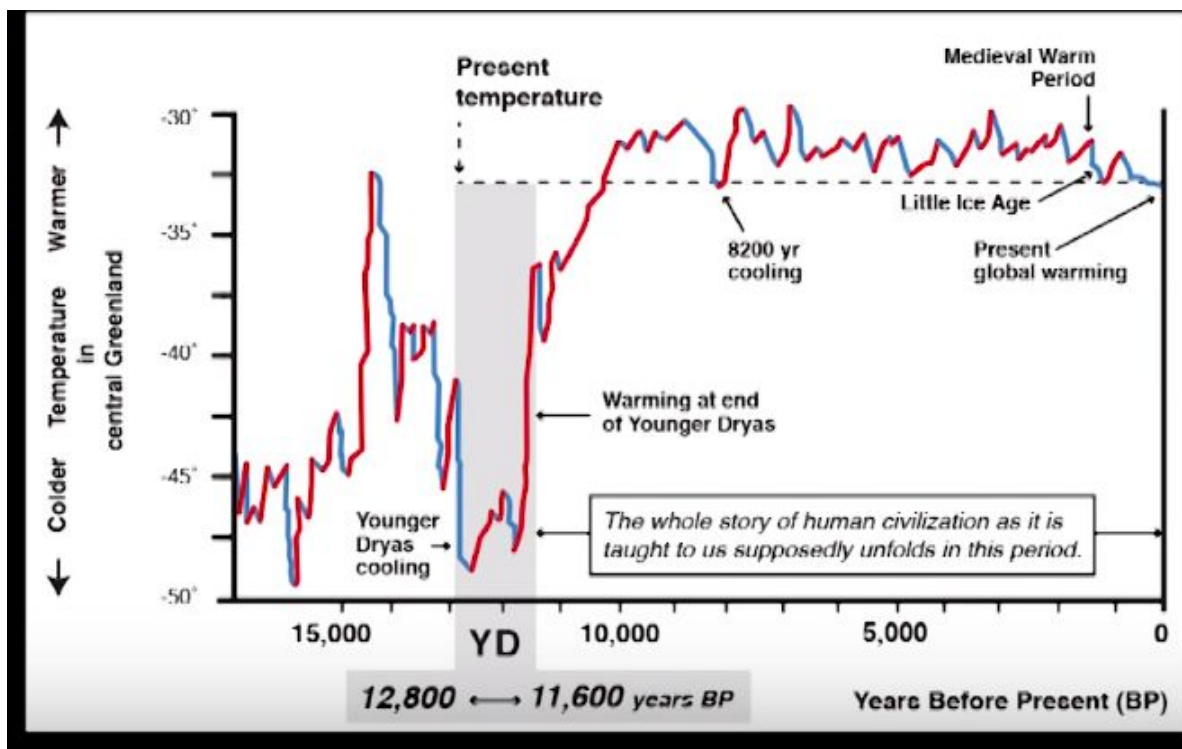

Well what else did Plato have to tell us of this ancient technologically advanced empire? Among many things he told us that the city was wiped out in a single event spanning only a single day and a single night. He said that the city “disappeared into the depths of the sea.” Hmmmmm, sounds kind of like a massive flood, huh?

“THIS TALE ABOUT ATLANTIS, THOUGH STRANGE, IS CERTAINLY TRUE, HAVING BEEN ATTESTED BY SOLON WHO WAS THE WISEST OF THE SEVEN SAGES”

- PLATO

Interesting, well when did Plato say that that event occurred? According to Solon, the city of Atlantis was wiped out around 9,000 years ago. That’s about 11,600 years ago from present day. This is one of the major reasons the scientific establishment scoffs at this account, as human civilization was not thought to have emerged until just 6,000 years ago in Sumeria. But then again, if there WAS a massive flood or cataclysmic event that happened, then perhaps all evidence of a previous civilization was destroyed. Perhaps leaving behind only a few monolithic stone pyramids that could stand the test of time...

So the key here is to find evidence of such a massive historical event occurring. Do the facts exist to back this scenario up? Actually quite a bit, it all has to do with an era in Earth's history known as the "Younger Dryas Period."

The Earth experienced a sudden cooling 12,800 years ago, followed by a huge sudden increase of temperature and sea levels only 1200 years later.

So what could possibly possibly cause such a sudden and drastic change in Earth's climate? Well, mainly asteroids. Just like the asteroid that destroyed the dinosaurs 65 million years ago, another one hit the north american ice cap 12,800 years ago. This impact melted such large quantities of ice that it cooled the entire Earth.

Despite all of this, up until last year, this scenario was referred to as a wild conspiracy theory and was scoffed at. This changed last year when a city sized crater was found under a Greenland glacier. This theory has suddenly gained a lot more credibility as a result.

Seen in pastel artwork based on the view from a NASA IceBridge flight, Greenland's Hiawatha Glacier holds a startling new secret—and raises new questions about Earth's recent past. ("Hiawatha Basin, Greenland," soft pastel on paper, 2017.)

ART BY ZARIA FORMAN

| SCIENCE & INNOVATION |

City-size impact crater found under Greenland ice

Ok, ok, but how does this relate to the story of Atlantis? Well if Solan was accurate and Atlantis had been destroyed 11,600 years ago, it would line up perfectly with the massive rise in sea levels found at the end of the Younger Dryas period. The science on what caused the end of this period is up in the air, but could it be explained by a magnetic pole shift as we talked about earlier? This would've lead not only to insane tidal waves, but would drastically raise the Earth's temperature as well. Now the only logical next question would be: "if the cataclysmic event has evidence of happening, where's the physical evidence of Atlantis itself??"

Above is an artist's rendition of what the city of Atlantis would look like based on the description given by Plato. Three rings of land with 2 rings of water. On the right is what's known as the Richat structure. Located in northwest Africa, this clearly artificial structure was left undiscovered until 1965 when it was spotted from above. It is almost impossible to see on ground level. The dimensions of this formation is identical to the measurements given by Plato. Nearly 24 kilometers across, everything from the mountains, to the southern water access described by Plato matches up.

Circular Island of Atlantis Diameter = 127 Stadia
1 Stadia = 607ft
 $127 \times 607 = 77,089\text{ft}$

77089	=	23.496727
Foot		Kilometer

Hmmm ok, well the resemblance is uncanny, but surely if such a civilization had existed there, there would be corroborating evidence in the form of ancient maps, right? Correct, enter another prominent Greek intellectual who lived in between Solon and Plato (he died when Plato was 2): Herodotus.

Solon	Herodotus	Plato

Bust of Solon from the National Museum, Naples	A Roman copy (2nd century AD) of a Greek bust of Herodotus from the first half of the 4th century BC	Roman copy of a portrait bust by Silanion for the Academia in Athens (c. 370 BC)
Native name Σόλων	Native name Ἡρόδοτος	Native name Πλάτων
Born c. 638 BC Athens	Born c. 484 BC Halicarnassus, Caria, Asia Minor, Persian Empire	Born 428/427 or 424/423 BC Athens, Greece
Died c. 558 BC (aged 80)	Died c. 425 BC (aged approximately 60) Thuri, Calabria or Pella, Macedon	Died 348/347 BC (age c. 80) Athens, Greece
		Notable work Apology Phaedo Symposium

Among other things, Herodotus was known to categorize and record all types of information, sometimes maps. Below is one such map, where he labels the northwest of Africa as “Atlantes” which perfectly fits the location of the Richat.

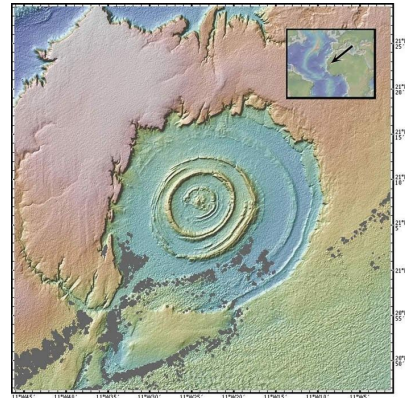

Let's take a closer look at the geological aspects of the structure for more clues. As you can see below, you can almost see in the sand the ancient streams of water washing back into the sea.

Atlantis was said to be an island with direct access to the sea. Clearly that is not currently the case. Hmmm, but what happens if we raise the sea level a bit, how does the topography of the area work out?

Well would you look at that? Certainly looks like a match, and if there was a massive meteor impact 11,600 that caused a tidal wave then subsequent water level rise (followed by tectonic plate movement that would elevate the continent), the city certainly would've been submerged, then exposed and landlocked as it is now. Very interesting, are there anymore clues we can find in the physical appearance of this anomaly? Well for one, the structure is also referred to as the “Eye of Africa”, and for good reason:

Hmmmmmm, now where have we seen this blue eye before? Oh that's right, EVERYWHERE lol

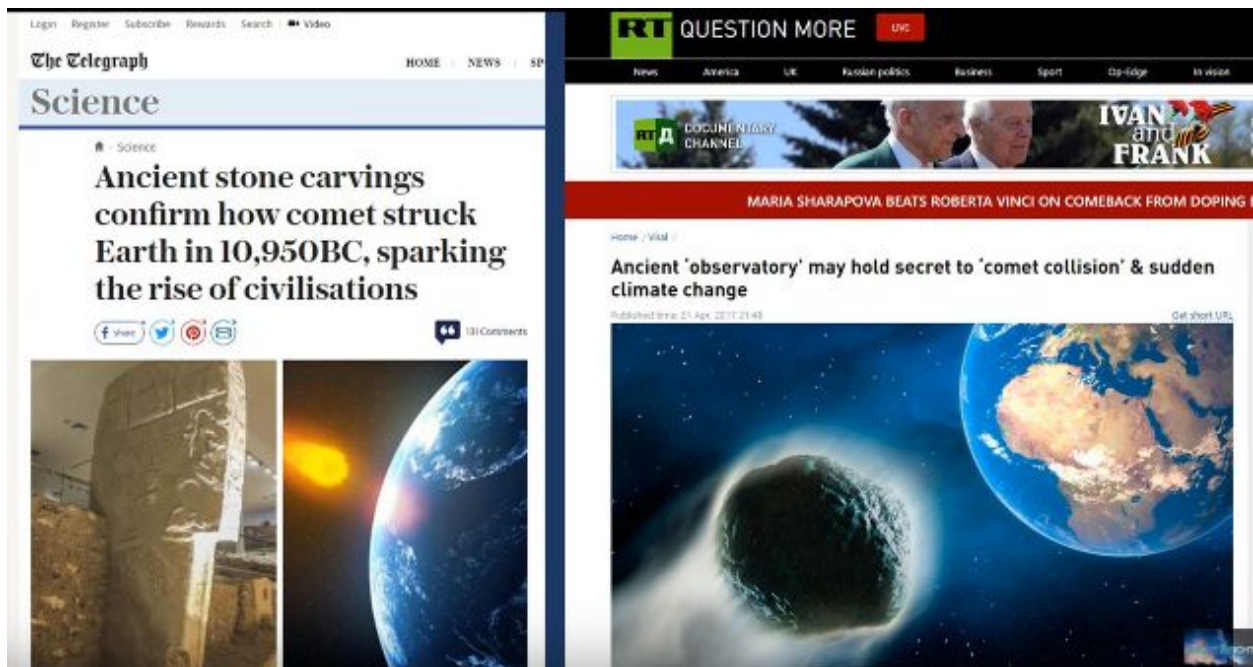

Now if Atlantis was indeed an empire, as opposed to just a single city, it would certainly follow that ancient cultures with megalithic architecture such as the Incans and Egyptians could have been colonies. This would explain their similar designs, mythos and artistic motifs. Could there have been a global, advanced civilization nearly 12,000 years ago? If there was, what other evidence beyond Atlantis exists to support the idea?

Enter Gobekli Tepe.

While Atlantis may have been washed under the sea, Gobekli Tepe was buried under the ground. The name, “Gobekli Tepe” means “pot-bellied hill”, in the early 90’s archelogist’s finally investigated this odd hill. What they found completely rewrites the history books. The site contains megalithic stone structures, meticulously arranged in accordance with astronomy. This sounds familiar to the Giza Plateau in Egypt, no? Well perhaps it’s because the carbon dating on at the site places the time of burying at 11,600 years ago. Not only the date of the global cataclysm we talked about earlier, but the same era that the Sphinx has been dated too (based off water erosion patterns). Perhaps this was another colony of the Atlantean empire? It certainly seems so.

Stone carvings at the site even describe a meteor impact, just like the one of 12,800 years ago. Ok, so if this site was purposely buried, right before the pole shift that rapidly raised sea levels/caused a global cataclysm, where did these people go?

Well this question might be answered by continuing to explore the subterranean environment of Turkey. Here we find another enigma, there have been over 200 underground cities. 100's of feet underground, with tunnels cut through volcanic rock that connect the cities. These cities could hold tens of thousands of people and livestock. This would be an ideal set up for surviving a cataclysm.

This is interesting as not only are there chambers and tunnels that go underneath the Egyptian pyramids and sphinx, but there are other such underground structures elsewhere. Such as the ancient city of Petra. This site could've held over 60,000 people inside its gigantic and laser precision carved walls.

Ok, so where are we at now? We've determined that the Earth's electromagnetic field not only has ley lines where it's energy can be tapped into with structures like pyramids, but it has a set, roughly 12,960 (1+2+9+6+0=18/1+8=9, btw) year cycle that culminates in a pole shift. We know that there was an advanced Atlantan empire that built these megalithic stone structures that we find across the planet. We also know that there exist many underground and underwater cities that could support thousands of people. This leaves us with an interesting question, if this advanced civilization had the capability to build these structures and cities, where are they now? Did they ever come back above ground?

Or did they, perhaps, go deeper?

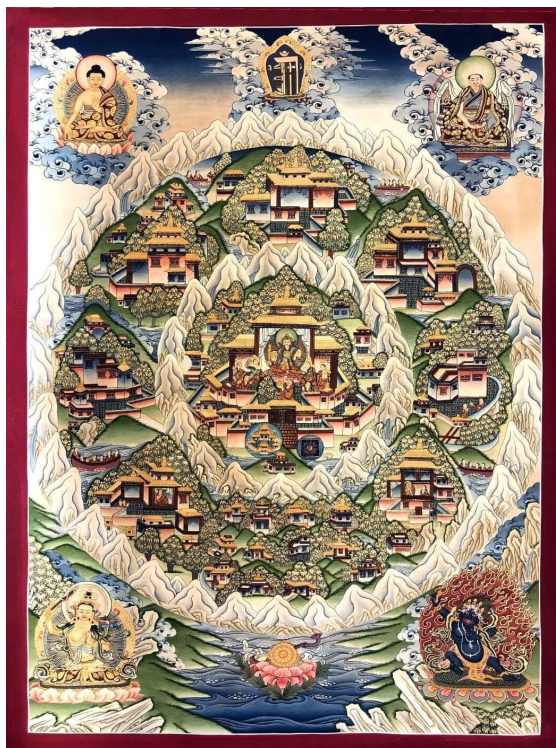

Huh? A hollow earth? Isn't that just a crazy theory, equally ridiculous as the "flat earth" one? Maybe not. Let's take a look at what we know about the earth's crust. Although we have only ever drilled about 8 miles down, the German Continental Deep Drilling Program at 9.1 kilometres (5.7 mi) has shown the earth crust to be mostly porous. This means that the nearly 4000 mile deep planet could very well hold plentiful room for an ancient civilization to stay safe from earth's chaotic cycles on the surface. Indeed, on June 13th 2014, scientists discovered a body of water 3x the volume of all of our oceans, nearly 400 miles into the earth. But if the earth is hollow, where are the entrances?

Well for that, we need to remember some info from earlier sections. Mainly the universal shape of the "torus" field. If the earth is indeed a torus like the rest of structures in the universe, it would go to reason that there would be holes at the top and bottom where the magnetic energy creates holes in the earth's lower density crust.

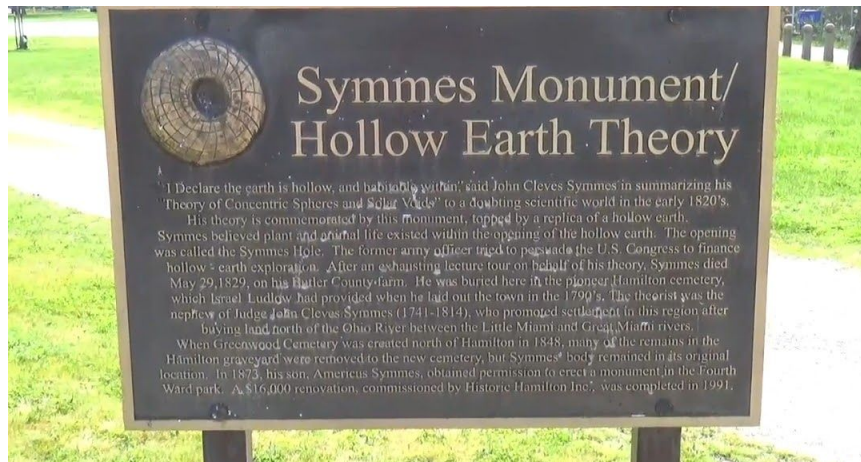

If this is true, surely we should be able to find evidence of this in the legends of cultures around the world, do we? For that, let's once again refer to the wisdom of Buddhism. Earlier we covered the ways that this ancient eastern school of thought lines up with quantum physics, and how Nikola Tesla's ideas of the omnipresent "eather" were influenced by the eastern esoteric concept of the "akashic records". So what other secrets might this culture have to share with us?

Indeed, the Tibetan Buddhists have a story of an inner earth city known as "Shambhala." This city was said to have been inhabited by an advanced race of people, who would one day return to the surface to liberate the people of the surface and lead them to a "Golden Age". Very interesting, if it was talked about in the east, let's see if we can find any additional legends in the west.

Above is monument located in Ohio, dedicated to John Cleves Symmes, a devout believer in the hollow earth theory. Notice how the torus shape is once again represented. His ideas were inspired by 18th century philosopher Edmond Halley, the man who named “Halley’s Comet”.

What’s even more interesting, is a certain multiple thousands year old structure built by native americans. This monument is known as “Snake Mound” for obvious reasons.

It is located near what's called the "Hocking Hills", a cavernous region with multiple waterfalls. I visited this monument for the summer solstice this year, when the head of the serpent perfectly aligns with the sun setting in the valley of 2 hills. The ridge the head of snake points off of was said to be formed from a meteorite impact. What I was surprised to find out upon my visit was that, according to a plaque on the site, the mound was originally built to honor the "winged serpent god ruler of the world-below".

Could this mound have been built to mark the entrance to the inner earth? Could this "serpent god of the world-below" be a relative of the serpent annunaki god Enki? Are there any similar legends elsewhere? Let's head south to Mexico.

Above is the ancient Aztec city of Tenochtitlan, located 30 miles outside of Mexico City. It is the oldest, and most sophisticated city of Meso-America. It could hold 100,000 people, and features 2 large pyramids, as well as a temple dedicated to Quetzalcoatl. Pyramids you say? Sounds familiar huh? Well, there are even more similarities to Egypt, including the fact that there are 0 hieroglyphs in the city, and the fact that we have NO idea who built it. The Aztec people only inhabited it later, much like the dynastic Egyptians with their pyramids. Oh, remember how the Giza plateau mirrors a computer board on a macro scale? Check this out.

So who built it? It certainly seems like its level of architecture of Atlantean colonies like Egypt. Indeed, the word “Tenochtitlan” means “city of the gods” and specifically, the Aztecs believe the city was dedicated to Quetzalcoatl. Who is he?

Well, believe it or not, he was a “feathered serpent” god. It was also said that he originated from Venus, which is interesting in relation to newly released (on July 7th (7/7) 2019) FBI documents on Nikola Tesla, lol.

Margaret Storm has been assigned to certain work with the Space People, as follows: She is writing a book - Return of the Dove - a story of the life of Nikola Tesla, scientist, and the part his inventions will play in the New Age. Much of the data for this book has been supplied to Mrs. Storm through transcripts received on the Tesla set, a radio-type machine invented by Tesla in 1938 for Interplanetary Communication. Tesla died in 1943 and his engineers did not build the Tesla set until after his death. It was placed in operation in 1950 and since that time the Tesla engineers have been in close touch with space ships. The Space People have visited the Tesla engineers many times, and have told us that Tesla was a Venusian, brought to this planet as a baby, in 1856, and left with Mr. and Mrs. Tesla in a remote mountain province in what is now Yugoslavia.

Perhaps the most puzzling part of this civilization is we have no idea where they went. This is a common theme of the region, as 95% of the Mayan civilization disappeared as well, abandoning their cities right around the 10th baktun of their Mayan calendar (remember that thing?) The surviving Mayans, left behind, claim that the others “went home”. Could they have escaped to the “world-below?”

Speaking of their “home”, what was it called? Believe it or not, it was called “Aztlán”. Sounds awfully familiar, doesn’t it? Better yet, when does their legends place their origin story in time? Roughly 11,600 years ago, the exact era of the global cataclysm that Plato said destroyed the capital of Atlantis. Their legends indicate that they came to Mexico from a red canyon with 4 rivers, where 4 rivers intersect. To find this, modern investigators looked north to Utah, in the 4 corners region where the borders of Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona meet. This is also where the Green, Colorado, and San Juan rivers meet and merge into a 4th combined stream.

Here, hieroglyphs were found extremely similar to those of the Aztec, and to top it off, they described the cycles of Venus, which ties back to Quetzalcoatl (its astrological equivalent). This is interesting because yet another tribe native to the area, the Ancestral Puebloans, claim they were brought to the area on a “steel bird” from Venus, that then went into the ground and became the local “Shiprock” formation.

Venus is also referred to as the “morning star” since it is the closest object to us after the moon, and can be seen in the morning, which is interesting given in Revelation 22:16, Jesus also refers to himself as “the bright morning star”. The similarities between Jesus and Quetzalcoatl don’t end there. The Catholic missionaries that accompanied Cortez to investigate the savage’s legends, were dismayed to find that they too had a legend of god man who was born to a virgin on December 25th. Those two characters also went into the desert for 40 nights, they were both crucified, and were both resurrected 3 days later. This information was consolidated into a codex that was taken to the Vatican but never released as it would raise questions about creation, as the Aztec had a pantheon of gods that created humanity (much like the Summerians). Speaking of the Summerians, there is evidence that indicates that Enki (the reptilian god of the realms below that also brought great knowledge to humanity), left Sumeria, then arrived in Egypt as Osiris. Egyptian legend says Osiris was killed by Set, but was then resurrected as the sun god Horus on..... December 25th. When Horus battles Set, he takes advantage of Venus rising early in the morning. Horus then disappears from Egyptian texts. Supposedly from there he traveled to Mexico and was called Quetzalcoatl.

Above is one of the earliest descriptions of Quetzalcoatl, from the Omec (earliest tribe of Mesoamerican peoples) site of Le Venta. Depicting a serpent behind a man in a shamic ritual. Do you see what's in his hand? THE EXACT SAME "GIFT" THE SUMMERIAN GODS HELD.

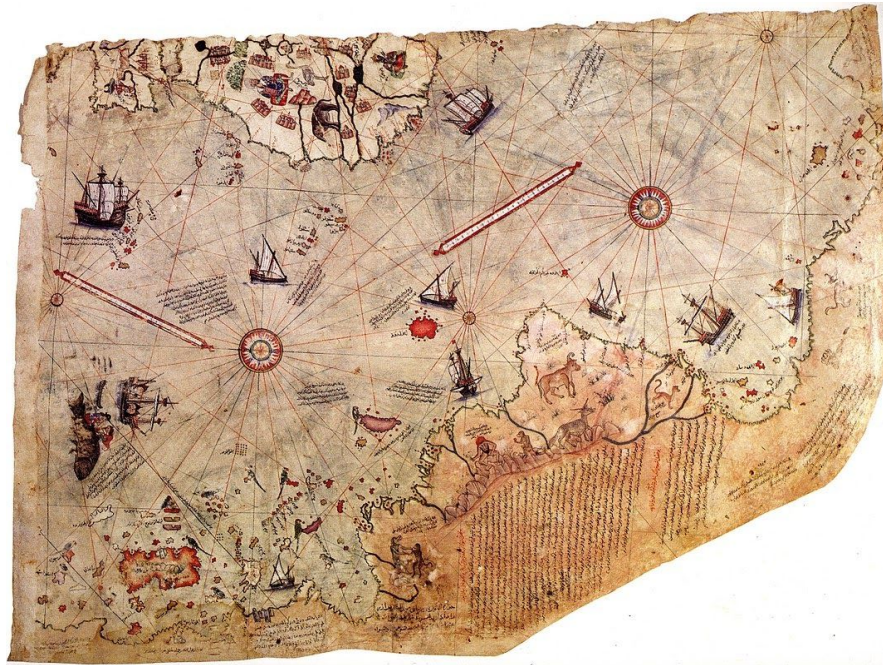

Ok, so if the Mesoamerican tribes came from this area, where did they live? Well according to tribal legends from the Aztec and Hopi for example, they lived in the many caves found in the area. The Hopi even claim that they are on their 4th world, the first 3 being lived out INSIDE the earth itself.

They say they emerged from the earth, which matches up with the idea of global cataclysms, like that of the Younger Dryas. They also claimed they interacted with reptilian humanoids called the “lizard people”. These cave systems are actually part of a much larger system of tunnels that stretch across the North American continent.

There are many more examples of legends of underground civilizations such as Agartha from around the world, but let’s go back to talking about the poles. As we covered earlier, the Earth’s poles are extremely important to its torus structure. The two landmasses on these poles, the Arctic and Antarctica both happen to be approximately 5.4 (5+4=9) million miles across. Despite not being claimed by any nation, any flights over the poles are strictly prohibited by international law. In fact, no travel there is authorized except for scientific research. Particularly interesting is Antarctica, which has a landmass that is nearly the size of the United States and Mexico combined, under an ice sheet nearly a mile deep, and yet, at an elevation of 10,000 ft above sea level. Its other features include many mountain chains and a massive subglacial trench, 2 miles deep and more than 15 miles across. Given that we have only drilled 8 miles into earth, the depth of this trench is remarkable, almost like a gate to the underworld in a way.

So all of this begs a certain question, if this land is so large, has there ever been a human civilization there? What is beneath that ice, and why isn’t anyone allowed to go there?

One of our biggest hints comes from the above map originated from a 16th century Turkish admiral Piri Reis. What's interesting about this map is that it shows the coast of Antarctica... 300 years before the rest of civilization discovered it. Even MORE remarkable is that the map doesn't show the frozen, ice sheet covered land as we know it now, but ACCURATELY depicts the land mass below. How is this possible? Where could this man have gotten the details of a land under ice for thousands of years? Well according to him, the map was based on 20 or so source maps that he obtained from the imperial library of Constantinople, dated all the way back to the time of Alexander the Great (300BC).

The same Alexander the Great that founded the legendary Library of Alexandria (pictured being burned to the ground above). This library had an extensive collection of information obtained from the ancient civilizations of Persia, Egypt, and India. As Plato told us, Egypt was a colony of Atlantis, and therefore, it is possible these maps contained information from BEFORE the global cataclysm of 12,600 years ago that destroyed that advanced civilization.

Could Antarctica itself be a colony of the advanced Atlantean empire as well? It certainly seems possible, especially given the limited exploration we've been permitted. As time goes on, we continue to receive a slow drip of discoveries in Antarctica, accelerated by the rapidly accelerating melting of its ice. Take for instance, a sighting of a domed structure that appeared on Google Earth. This accompanies other discoveries such as a landmark that looks VERY familiar.

ICY ATLANTIS? New satellite images reveal mysterious dome structure hidden in Antarctica fuelling shock claims an ancient civilisation once lived there

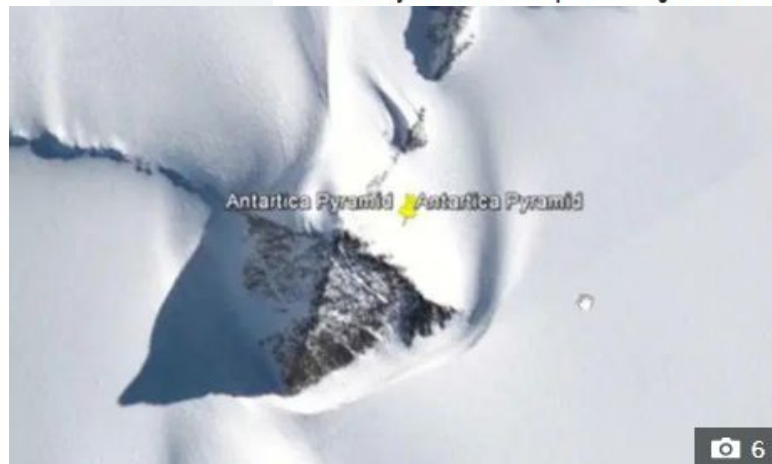

A strange 'building' has appeared on the icy continent, which is claimed to be home to a hidden ancient city

Jennifer Hale

6 Jan 2017, 9:17 | Updated: 6 Jan 2017, 13:28

The mysterious oval-shaped building can be seen from satellite images

While mainstream science tells us that the ice formed in Antarctica 3.4 million years ago, it formed in sheets, the most recent, forming some 20,000 years ago.

Could these structures have been covered by water during the Younger Dryas (or an even earlier event) period and then frozen beneath the ice?

Well recent discoveries like that of turtle bones in the area, confirms that the climate was once MUCH different than it is currently.

Science  NBCNEWS.com Search  Search

Ancient turtle bones discovered in Antarctica

Jump to discuss Loading comments...

Below:

By Clara Moskowitz
Updated 10:18:20 2:42:44 PM ET Print | Font:  A + -

An ancient turtle's fossils, dating from roughly 45 million years ago, were recently discovered in Antarctica.

The bones, only two fragments from a turtle's carapace, or shell, were unearthed in the La Meseta Formation on Antarctica's Seymour Island by an expedition of the Antarctic Institute of Argentina.

While the researchers can't pin down exactly which species the turtle, or turtles — the fragments may not come from one individual — belonged to, the bones are not from any species that was already known to live in the region during this prehistoric era, which is known as the Eocene Epoch.

Bones from an ancient turtle were recently discovered at La Meseta Formation on Antarctica's Seymour Island.

These recent developments may explain why various elite figures have visited the remote continent recently. Among them, John Kerry, who visited on election day 2016 for some reason, and Buzz Aldrin, who had to be medically evacuated.

John Kerry's Antarctica Visit Highlights a Continent, and Climate Policies, Under Threat

Secretary of State John Kerry on a frozen section of the Ross Sea near Scott Base, Antarctica, on

INDY/LIFE

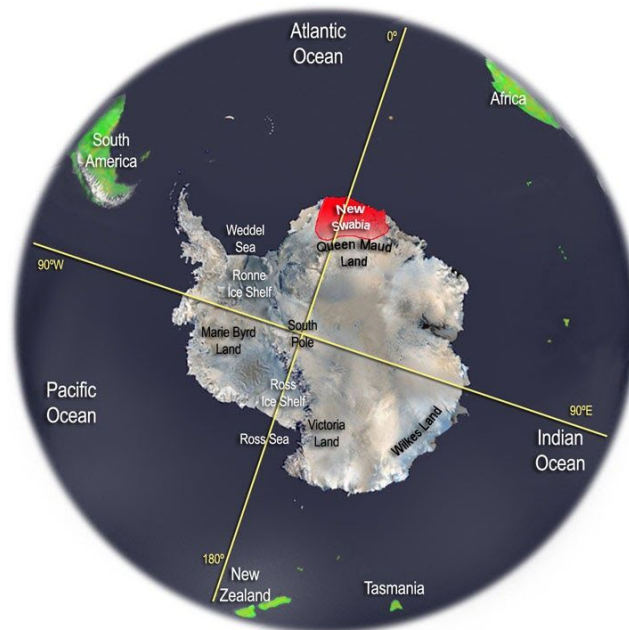

You can't (yet) repeat Buzz Aldrin's trip to the moon, but you can retrace his steps to the second-most alien environment he's explored. Nigel Henbest joins him

This is interesting, do we have ANY accounts of what may be going on there? Well there was one prolific example of an expedition lead by one Admiral Richard E. Byrd. Admiral Byrd was well known for his expeditions over both the north and south poles. One mission in particular, referred to as “Operation Highjump” which was a US military expedition with the official goals as follows:

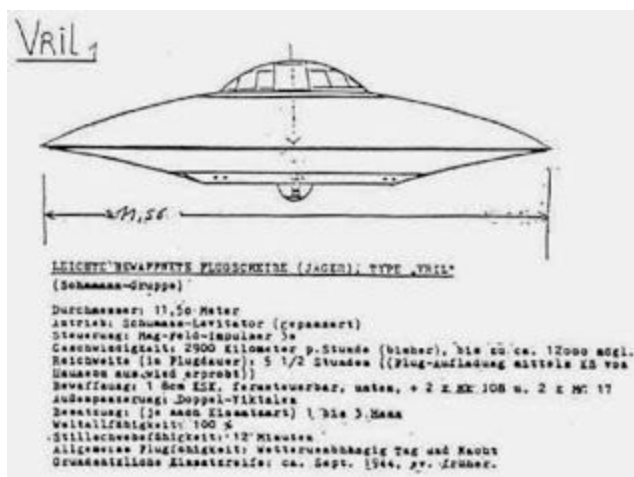

Highjump's objectives, according to the U.S. Navy report of the operation, were:^[3]

1. Training personnel and testing equipment in frigid conditions;
2. Consolidating and extending the United States' sovereignty over the largest practicable area of the Antarctic continent (publicly denied as a goal even before the expedition ended);^[3]
3. Determining the feasibility of establishing, maintaining, and utilizing bases in the Antarctic and investigating possible base sites;
4. Developing techniques for establishing, maintaining, and utilizing air bases on ice, with particular attention to later applicability of such techniques to operations in interior Greenland, where conditions are comparable to those in the Antarctic;
5. Amplifying existing stores of knowledge of electromagnetic, geological, geographic, hydrographic, and meteorological propagation conditions in the area;
6. Supplementary objectives of the Nanook expedition (a smaller equivalent conducted off eastern Greenland).^[2]

But, what's interesting is when you consider the fact that Hitler and his Nazis had supposedly established an Antarctic base as well.

While it's stated purpose was for whaling, the Nazis were also obsessed with pursuing ancient artifacts that they believed to be powerful. These activities were handled by the infamous Nazi "Vril Society". This group supposedly contained many high level Nazis, including Hitler himself and shared members with the later "Thule Society". This was an occult group that reportedly were responsible for many supernatural experiments and inventions. One such device was called the Vril, which they released blueprints of:

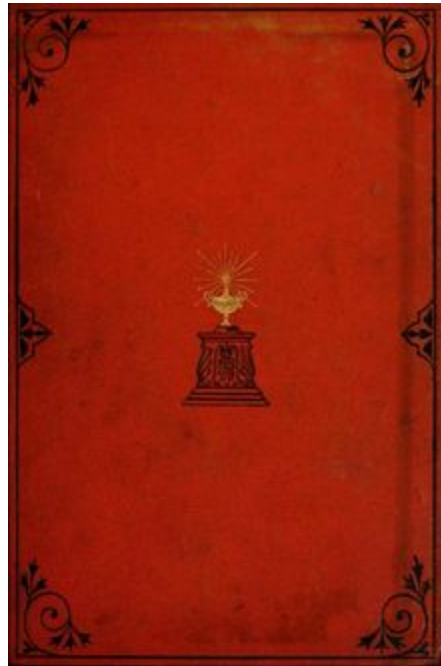

After the conclusion of World War II, many Nazi personnel, including all the members of the Vril Society were nowhere to be found. In addition, it is well known that the Nazis had bases in South America, and supposedly quite a few escaped there after the war. Could then, “Operation Highjump” possibly have a secret purpose? To investigate this Nazi outpost perhaps?

What evidence do we have to suggest this? Well first of all, the size and make up of Taskforce 68 does seem oddly well armed for a non-military mission, it included 4,700 men, 13 ships, and 33 aircraft. The only other information we have about said mission is an interview that Byrd gave to Lee van Atta of International News Service, that was published in the Chilean newspaper El Mercurio. In this interview, not only does Byrd discuss a threat to the United States from the poles, but the fact that the world was “rapidly shrinking” due to technology and that the US could be attacked extremely quickly.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd warned today that the United States should adopt measures of protection against the possibility of an invasion of the country by hostile planes coming from the polar regions. The admiral explained that he was not trying to scare anyone, but the cruel reality is that in case of a new war, the United States could be attacked by planes flying over one or both poles. This statement was made as part of a recapitulation of his own polar experience, in an exclusive interview with International News Service. Talking about the recently completed expedition, Byrd said that the most important result of his observations and discoveries is the potential effect that they have in relation to the security of the United States. The fantastic speed with which the world is shrinking – recalled the admiral – is one of the most important lessons learned during his recent Antarctic exploration. I have to warn my compatriots that the time has ended when we were able to take refuge in our isolation and rely on the certainty that the distances, the oceans, and the poles were a guarantee of safety.^{[9][2]}

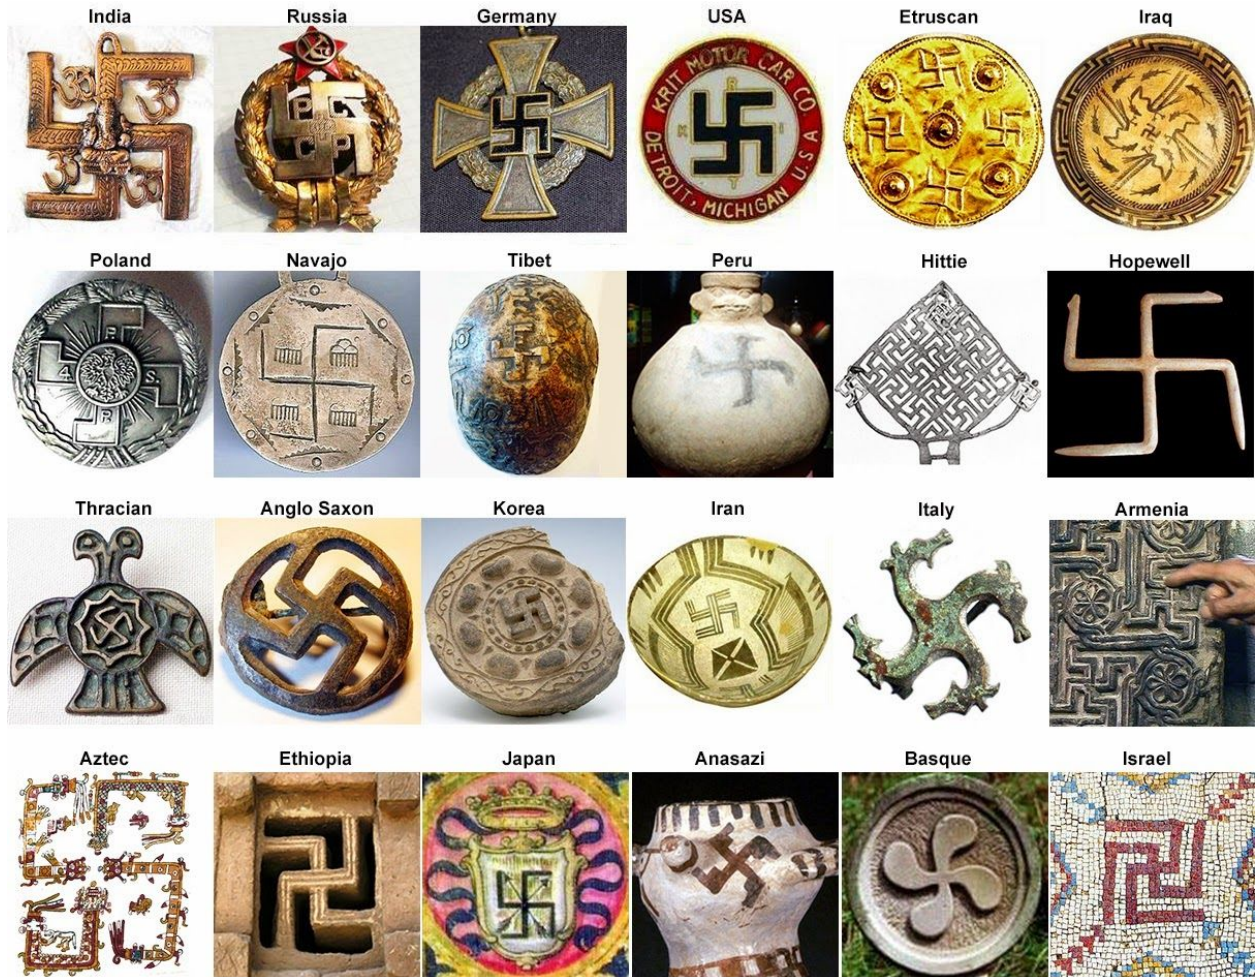

Could Admiral Byrd have been sent to Antarctica to investigate a Nazi base, and have been met by UFO craft like the “Vril” which led him to make those statements? Furthermore, if he did encounter such an advanced force, where did the Nazis obtain this technology? What beliefs did the Vril Society hold? And how does it tie into the rest of this section? Well, the Vril Society's beliefs were based on a novel published in 1870 by Edward Bulwer-Lytton. Edward who was a member of British Royalty.

In this book, he describes “vril” as a type of omnipresent energy, this is the same energy that the “Vril” craft was said to run on. Could this energy be the same as the zero point energy that Tesla talked about harvesting? In this “science fiction” novel, the main character discovers an underground civilization.... Inhabited by the descendants of Atlantis. This is the “Coming Race” that the title talks about. The Vril society itself, was supposedly formed in 1918 in Bavaria (Also the founding place of the Bavarian Illuminati), Vril was formed from the ancient Sumerian word "Vri-Il" ("like god"). It's founders believed they had receive psychic messages from the same beings that had come to Earth, Sumeria in particular. Yes. This group was referring to the same Annunaki beings we talked about earlier. This leads us to the symbol of the Nazis, (a slight variation was used for the Vrtil society), the ancient symbol of the Swastika.

As you can see, the symbol had been used in many of the cultures we have talked about previously, including the Aztec, the Indians and the Tibetans. Most notably, this stood for a sign of luck and good fortune, and used often in Buddhist symbology. In 1923, Karl Haushofer led a mission to Tibet.

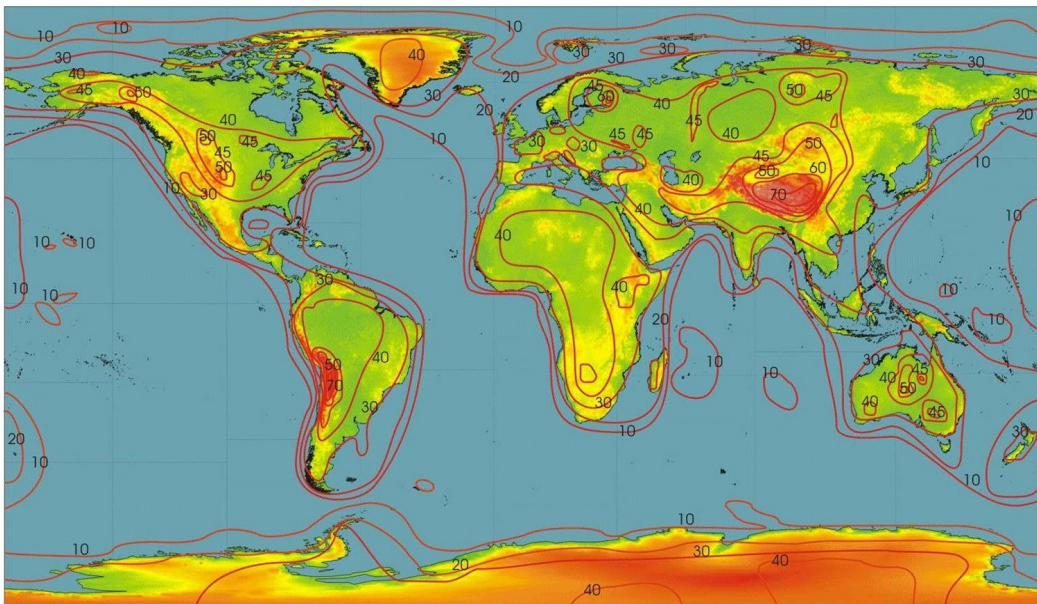

The purpose of this mission? To make contact with the “Aryan forefathers” living in underground cities below the Himmilayen Mountains. This is in accordance with the Tibetan legends of Shambhala, which come from the Vajrayana Buddhism and Tibetan Kalachakra teachings. The Tibetans are said to be the proctors of the entrances to this world, with the Dali Lama as the head of their representation to the outer world.

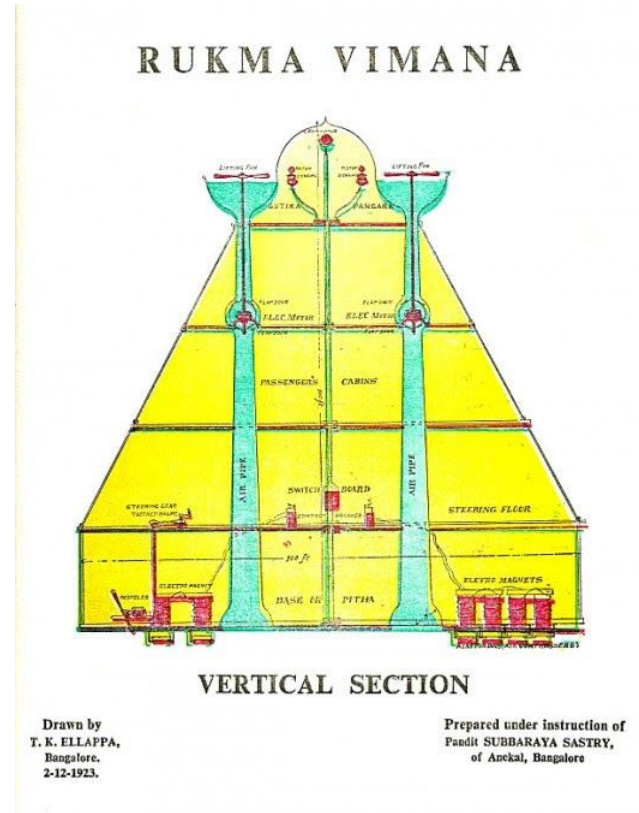

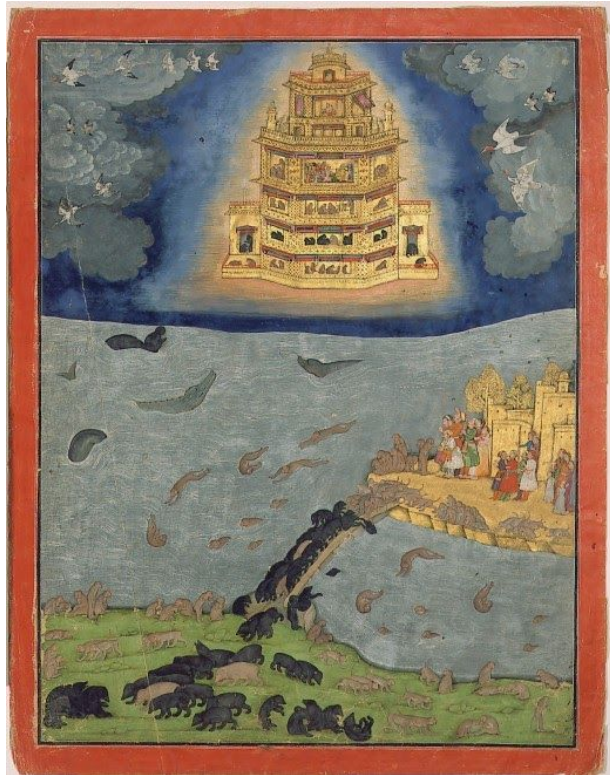

What else do we find in the legends of these Buddhist cultures? But the Nagas, a race of advanced subterranean reptilian humanoids. Sound familiar? It appears as if the Nazi's were on to the exact same pieces of hidden history that we are exploring in this guide.

These legends of underground civilizations in Asia, specifically in the Himalayas hold special weight given that this area has the thickest crust on the planet. This was formed by the Indian plate colliding with the main asian plate, creating an area of the crust with double the thickness. There certainly would be plenty of room for such a civilization.

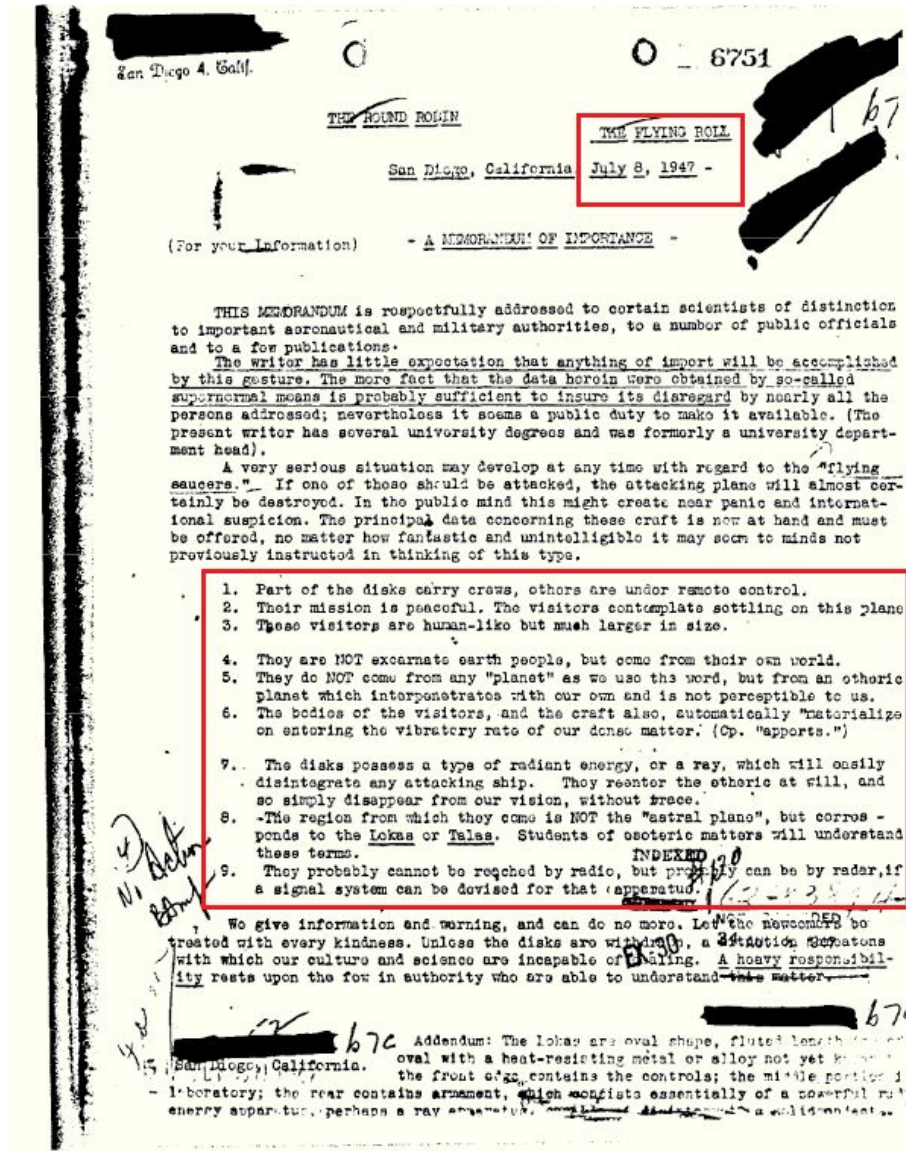

Ok, so the Nazi's were trying to contact underground beings in Tibet, what else ties these two topics together. The Vimanas and Vailixi are two types of ancient craft described in the ancient Verdic texts of the East, specifically the Indian Mahabharata. An artist's representation of the described craft is also included below.

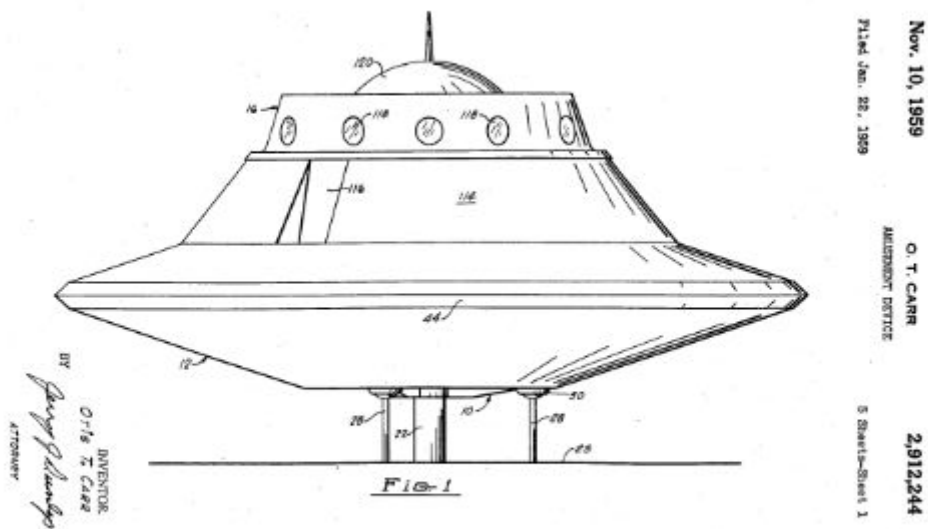

These craft were described as flying war craft that could take off vertically. A pretty close match to the modern day idea of the UFO. So knowing all of this about the Nazis, their advanced technology and attempts to contact advanced underground beings, let's go back to 1947.

Probably one of the biggest indications that Byrd was referring to UFO craft in that March 1947 interview, is the events of June 1947, in Roswell, New Mexico.

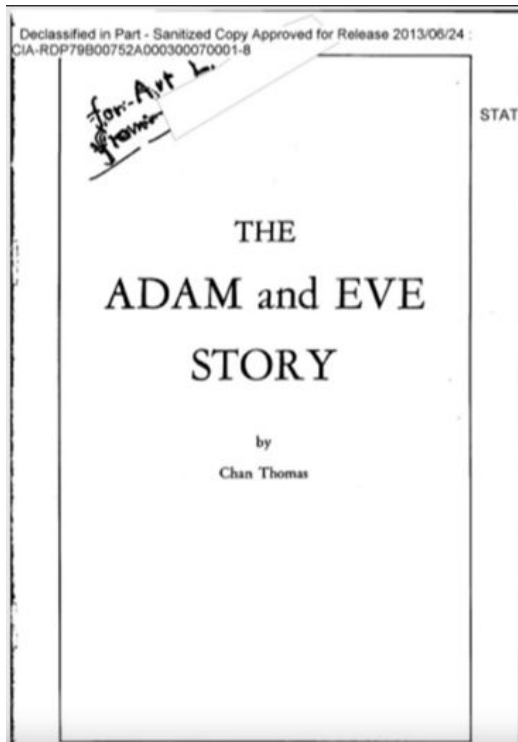

While the event is considered modern myth by most, above is a legitimate, declassified FBI document describing not only the flying discs, but the beings inside as well. Note New Mexico's proximity to the four corners region mentioned earlier. Who else do we know that used ancient eastern teachings to create advanced technology? Of course we're back to Nikola Tesla, who had died in 1943, his research then confiscated by the FBI. Tesla had also claimed to have been in contact with otherworldly, advanced beings. While Tesla never built or filed a particular patent for a UFO like craft, one of his students, Otis T. Carr, did file such a patent in 1959.

Alrighty, we've covered a lot of ground here, from ancient advanced civilizations, to cataclysms, to underground cities, to modern rediscoverings of these ancient technologies. How can we wrap this all up in a way that makes sense? For that, we'll be looking at a recently CIA declassified book. While written in 1963, the book has only recently been declassified do to a Freedom of Information Act request in 2013. Even then, it took until December of 2016 for the material to actually be released. What they released was a heavily edited version, which included only 57 pages of 284....

Information Act Electronic Reading Room

How to File a FOIA Request

How to Check on the Status of Your FOIA Request

How to File a Privacy Act Request

Frequently Requested Records

Annual Reports

Historical Collections

CREST: 25-Year Program Archive

President's Daily Brief

Documents Related to the Former Detention and Interrogation

FOIA Category Search | Advanced Search | Search Help

THE ADAM AND EVE STORY

Document Type: CREST

Collection: General CIA Records

Document Number (FOIA) / ESDN (CREST): CIA-RDP79B00752A000300070001-8

Release Decision: RIPPUB

Original Classification: K

Document Page Count: 57

Document Creation Date: December 27, 2016

Document Release Date: June 24, 2013

Sequence Number: 1

Case Number:

Publication Date: January 1, 1966

Content Type: MISC

File:

Attachment	Size
 CIA-RDP79B00752A000300070001-8.pdf	2.19 MB

Body:

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2013/06/24 : CIA-RDP79B00752A000300070001-8

So the question is, what is so important about this book that required it to be classified? Why would the CIA feel the need to take a random book off the shelves in 1963 and not even fully re release it 50 years later? Perhaps because it provides a narrative of ancient human history that those in power would rather remain hidden.

“As for those genealogies of yours which you have related to us, they are no better than tales of children; for in the first place, you remember one deluge only, whereas there were a number of them. And in the next place there dwelt in your land, which you do not know, the fairest and noblest race of men that ever lived of which you are but a seed or remnant. And this was not known to you because for many generations the survivors of that destruction made no records.”

Plato: Timaeus

(Spoken by a priest of Egypt)

Above is a quote included in the piece, originally found in the same Timaeus that Plato describes Atlantis in. Among the topics covered: pole shifts, global cataclysms, truth in ancient legends, similarities across ancient myth and architecture. Again, we find this work of the distant past has many similar points to what we've covered in this piece. For instance the connection between Jesus and Osiris:

Yes, Vishnu came alive: a man who lived through a cataclysm 70,000 years before our time — actually ten cataclysms ago! Now he is known as the Hindu god of ten resurrections from the waters. Osiris, too, was re-discovered; he was the Jesus of his time — a man of Egypt, some 15,000 years ago. Noah smiled at us from the pages of the “Epic of Gilgamesh”; he actually was a Sumerian named Utnapishtim, who lived 6,500 years ago. The ark he built is more than legend.

The process of a cataclysm is known now.

Most importantly, the document describes a 6,500 year cycle of global cataclysm causing magnetic pole shift. One such cycle that he says will return again shortly and reset our technology as it has done many times before.

Across the continent the thousand mile-per-hour wind wreaks its unholy vengeance, everywhere, mercilessly, unceasingly. Every living thing is ripped into shreds while being blown across the countryside; and the earthquake leaves no place untouched. In many places the earth's molten sub-layer breaks through and spreads a sea of white-hot liquid fire to add to the holocaust.

Within three hours the fantastic wall of water moves across the continent, burying the wind-ravaged land under two miles of seething water coast-to-coast. In a fraction of a day all vestiges of civilization are gone, and the great cities - Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Dallas, New York - are nothing but legends. Barely a stone is left where millions walked just a few hours before.

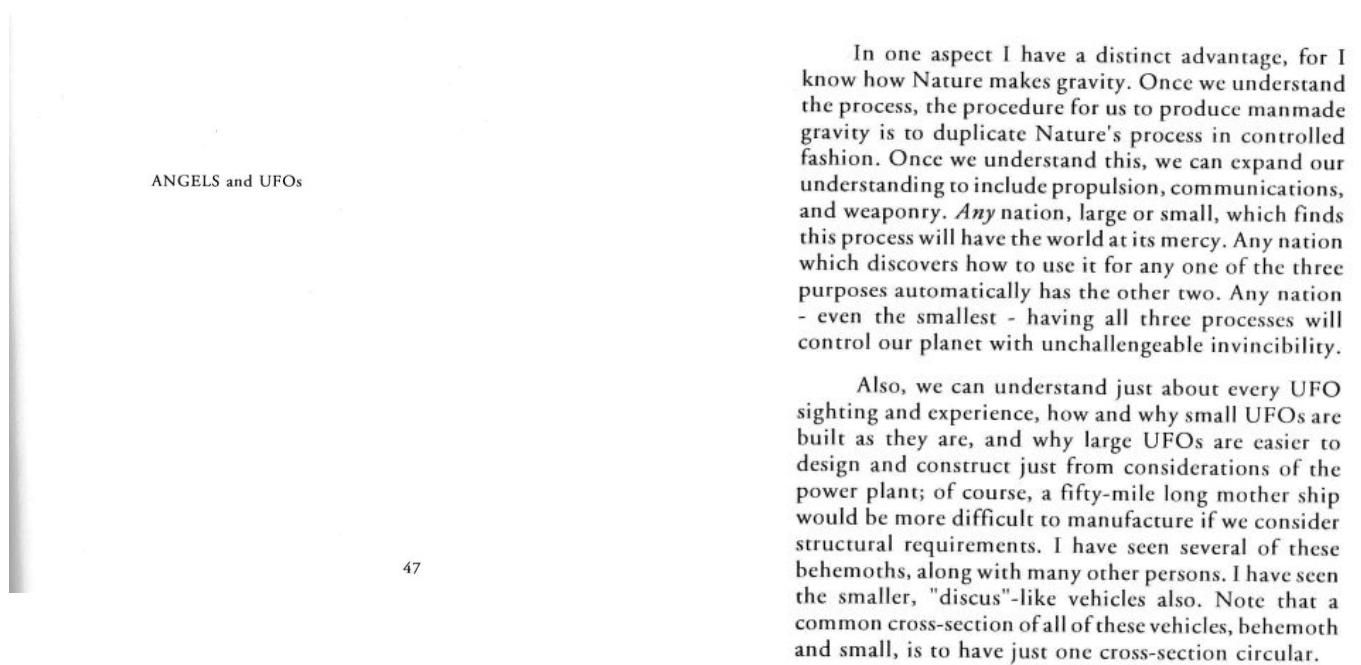

A few lucky ones who manage to find shelter from the screaming wind on the lee side of Pike's Peak watch the sea of molten fire break through the quaking valleys below. The raging waters follow, piling higher and higher, steaming over the molten earth-fire, and rising

Could this be the reason that the CIA had to classify this info? While the idea of pole shifts isn't popular in mainstream academia, the North pole has moved 600 miles since 1990, and others have floated this idea. In 1958, Charles Hapgood published "The Earth's Shifting Crust" which described a cycle of pole shifts, its forward was even provided by Albert Einstein. The difference between these two theories? Among others, the idea that at many times in the cycle the Earth's poles would suddenly switch and go back, all within one day. This would explain why we don't have archaeological evidence of a pole shift since around 780,000 years ago.

Oddly enough, this version of the pole shift theory, was the one used in the Hollywood production "2012". Also interesting, is the cowriter of "2012" also helped write "Stargate" which is a sci-fi movie in which the government's secret space program is run out of the Cheyenne Mountain base. This base was completed in 1966, meaning it was being built at the very same time that the CIA classified "The Adam and Eve Story". This complex, located deep inside a mountain in Colorado, also happens to be one of the few places far enough inland, and at a high enough elevation to be safe from a pole shift cataclysm. So what else of interest does this piece contain? Well in a recently discovered 1993 published version of this book (for whatever reason, was not classified, perhaps because sensitive parts were omitted), there is a section titled “Angels and UFOs” where the author describes parts of the bible where he believes UFOs are talked about.

This is interesting, because in 1947 (the same year as Operation Highjump and the Roswell event), the Dead Sea Scrolls were “discovered” by a shepherd in Palestine. He found 11 caves, containing 800 pieces of literature, including stories of Noah that we don’t find elsewhere, as well as parts of the Book of Enoch. The oldest scrolls are dated at around 300 BC, around the same time of Plato. The stories they contain include a story about Noah that says that he had a strange complexion, had strange eyes, and his father even questioned that he

So who were these “fallen angels”, and for that matter, who are these reptilian gods referred to around the world? If they existed, where are they now? What evidence exists? How have they managed to continue their rule behind the scenes in modern history? Where are we exactly on these many cycles we talked about, what’s coming and how are the elite preparing? What can we expect for the future of humanity?

All of the answers to these questions, coming up next in section 4 of “Woke”, “Anatomy of an Elite Breakaway Civilization”

200,232 views | Dec 8, 2017, 12:01pm

Has Our Government Spent $21 Trillion Of Our Money Without Telling Us?

Laurence Kotlikoff Contributor
Taxes

Section IV: Anatomy of an Elite Breakaway Civilization

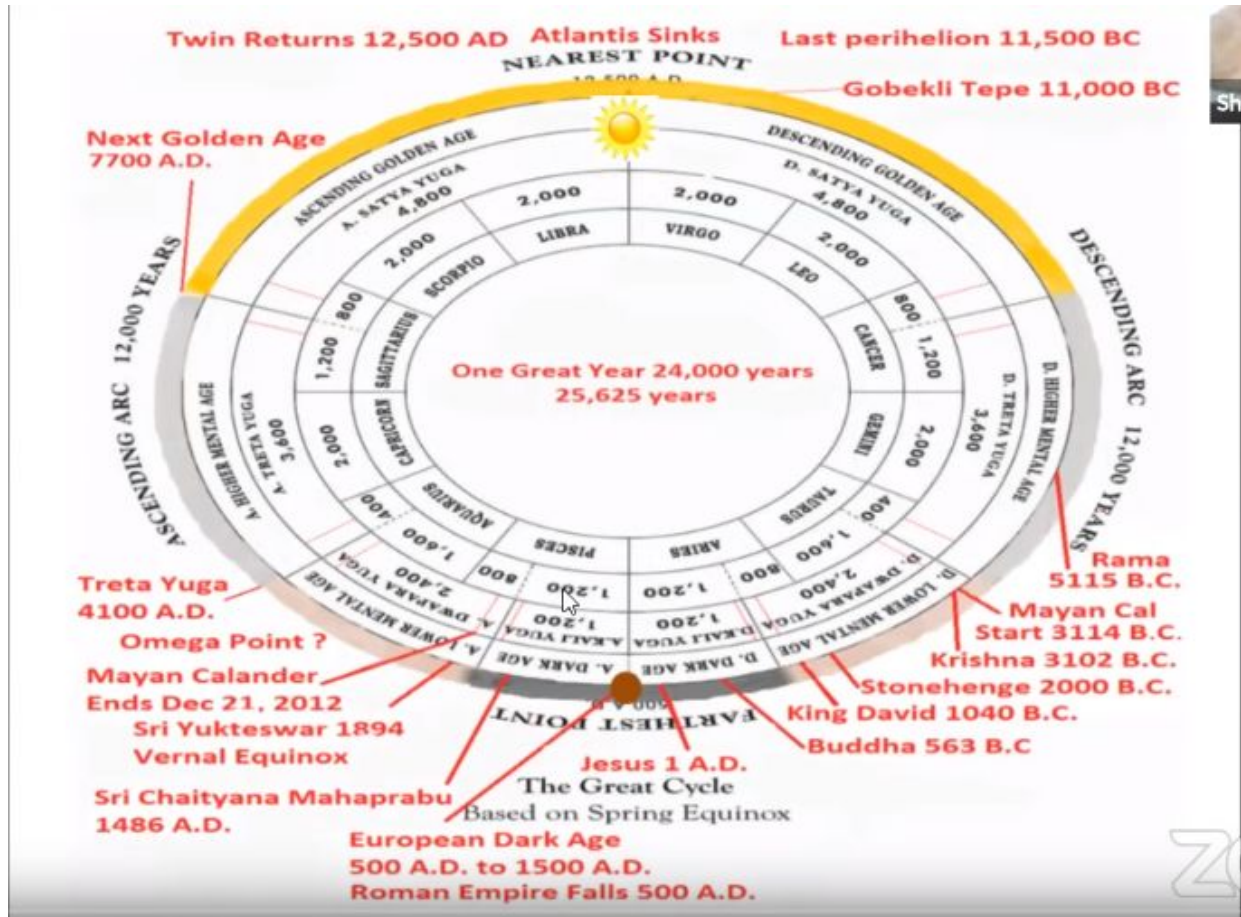

In the fourth and final section of “Woke”, we will be tying together everything we’ve learned about the energetic universe, how it functions, and our hidden history to give us the clearest possible setting for our modern situation.

So where should we start?

We know ancient advanced civilizations existed with a great understanding of our planet’s energetic cycles, where do these various schools of thought think we are currently on said cycle?

What does this mean for humanity's evolving consciousness?

The chart above combines Biblical events, Mayan dates, and the Hindu Yugas to give us a glimpse at where we currently find ourselves. In this Great Year Cycle of approximately 26,000 years, our planet travels through the solar system, getting closer and further away from the life giving Sun. In addition, our solar system itself travels through our larger galaxy, and we experience different densities of energy along the way. When we get closer to the Sun, we absorb higher frequency energy and experience what's referred to as a "Golden Age". This is where human consciousness reaches it's true potential, but like any cycle, it must continue on.

You are in: World: Americas
 Friday, 7 December, 2001, 10:01 GMT

Front Page
 World

Africa
 Americas
 Asia-Pacific Europe
 Middle East
 South Asia

From Our Own Correspondent

Letter From America
 UK
 UK Politics
 Business

'Lost city' found beneath Cuban waters

A team of explorers working off the western coast of Cuba say they have discovered what they think are the ruins of a submerged city built thousands of years ago.

See also:

- ▶ 20 Sep 01 | Sci/Tech
 Atlantis 'obviously near Gibraltar'
- ▶ 07 Jun 01 | Middle East
 Spectacular finds of lost city revealed
- ▶ 04 Jun 00 | Americas
 Explorer finds lost city
- ▶ 03 Jun 00 | Middle East
 Divers find Pharaohs' lost city

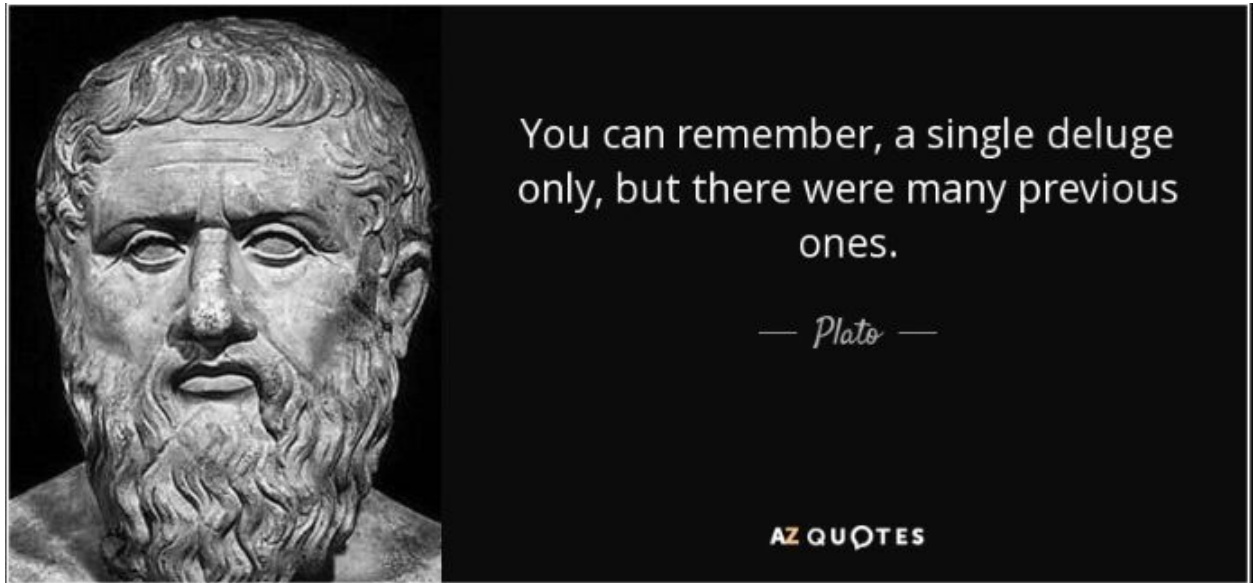

Internet links:

- ▶ Cuban Government

The BBC is not responsible for the content of external internet sites

Top Americas stories now:

As you can see, the Atlantean civilization of 12,000 years ago was in one of these Golden Ages. This of course was followed by a pole shift and its accompanying cataclysmic changes. The remnants of this once great civilization were then scattered across the earth, some cities left permanently underwater (like those off the coasts of Cuba, India, and Japan), while underground ones survived. Following this, it appears as if some of these “Atlanteans” returned to the surface to bring the keys to civilization to humanity. It also appears these beings may have also genetically modified early humanity (like what is described in the Sumerian Cuneiform) and perhaps even cross bred with them (as described in the Book of Enoch, with Noah possibly being one such cross being himself).

This is when we encounter the great deluge of around 6,000 years ago, that is spoken of in the Bible. This Great Flood was spoken of in many cultures around the world. The story of Noah and his ark are reflected in the Sumarian cuneiform tablets, where it is thought these legends originate. Below is an actual, real life reproduction of Noah's ark, based off of the measurements found in said texts. And yes it did actually float. An interesting thing, was there really only one family that survived? Or was this perhaps a blueprint handed out to many?

Following this deluge is where we find what mainstream history's beginning of modern human civilization. This is also where we find the legends of advanced "God" beings, such as Enki and Enlil of Sumeria. At the same time, we find similar figures in Egypt like Osiris, and then further west in North America, beings like Quetzalcoatl.

These beings, all described as knowledge bringers, along with Thoth (or Hermes as the Greeks called him) gifted our race with much of what makes up the understanding of reality. Mathematics, agriculture, religion, language, astrology, all supposedly "emerged" around this time.

These God beings, whatever or whoever they were seem to fade away from this point forward. So who was left in charge after these beings disappeared?

Enter the Pharaohs, Emperors, and Kings, of antiquity. Where did they get their authority of rule? A divine right to rule, based off of their bloodline, as they claimed to be direct descendants of the Gods.

Hmmmmmm, could this idea of royal bloodlines have some real world, biological implications, beyond simple superstition? Royal families currently face many genetic, degenerative health effects as a result of their generations of close breeding. Why have they decided to make this sacrifice, even as the most powerful figures in civilization?

Given that many cultures, such as the Egyptians and Summerians, they have recorded king's lists going back to Atlantis and even far, far beyond, this lineage is certainly of high priority.

How could we tell if these individuals are distant relatives of some other species? Are there any physical traits we can look for? And if so, what purpose does maintaining a certain DNA code (or frequency) enable these beings to accomplish?

Above you can see an ancient Incan Skull from South America on the left, and an ancient Egyptian statue on the right. And indeed, this type of elongated skull is not only found as artifacts, but depicted in the art of these cultures as well. Could this elongated skull be a leftover genetic trait of this previous “God” race?

So what are the details of these skulls and where they were found? Probably the most prolific set of elongated skulls have been found in Peru, the location of the Andes mountain range, which happens to be the second thickest part of Earth's crust next to the Himalayas. The Andes also has the second highest plateau in the world, right after the Tibetan Plateau (convenient for surviving floods). These similarities seem to take on a new meaning when you look at the peoples that inhabit these two areas side by side.

What else do we find in Peru? But the ancient megalithic stone city of Machu Picchu, high in the Andes mountains.

The final landmark of note that ties in with concepts covered in the previous section are what's known as the "Nazca Lines". These are massive geoglyphs, carved into the ground in the Nazca desert of southern Peru. These glyphs are only visible from the air. Perhaps a type of landing strip for flying craft like the UFOs we've talked about before?

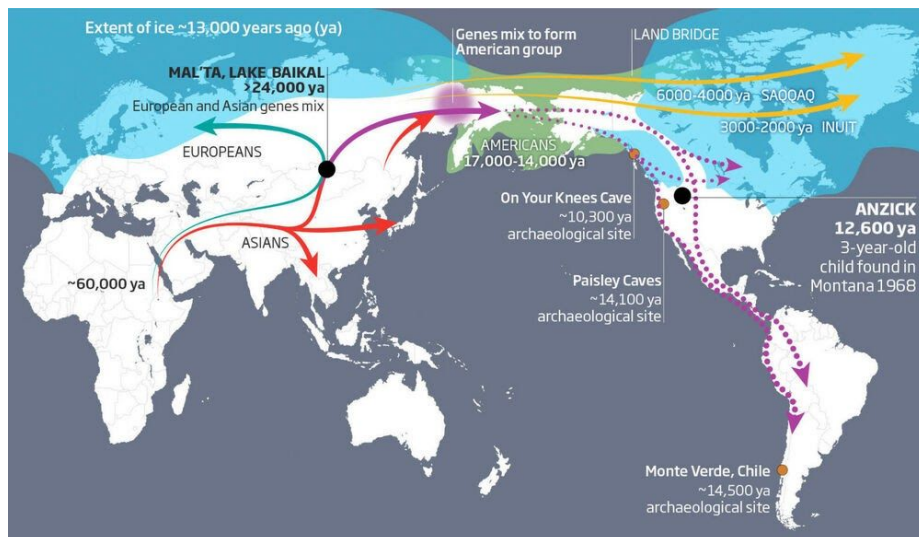

Ok, now that we have established the clear ties between this area and the rest of the ancient sites of section III, back to those elongated skulls. The group of largest elongated skulls ever found are referred to as the Paracas Skulls. Julio Tello, a Peruvian archaeologist, made the discovery in 1928, when he recovered more than 300 elongated skulls from the Paracas desert peninsula. While there are many ancient cultures around the world that participated in infant skull binding to artificially elongated skulls, this group has significantly higher brain volume. In Fact, these skulls are “25 percent larger and 60 percent heavier” than the average human skull. What’s perhaps the most mind boggling fact about these skulls is that they were so well preserved, some still have hair. Everytime hair is found, it is always..... Red.

This is especially significant, as according to popular science, all native americans came over the Bering land bridge between Russia and Alaska that is now underwater.

Because of this fact, the natives of these American continents share a handful of tribal genealogies, none of which should include the DNA for red hair. When DNA tested, one of these red haired skulls had coding never found in humans previously. So where does red hair originate? The middle east, specifically, the same area as Sumeria. It may be no coincidence, then, that we find the other largest stash of elongated skulls in Iraq. Also important to note, that the Vrill delegation to Tibet measured the skulls of the monks to determine if they were descendents of their prized “aryan” race. Could these elongated skull beings in these two parts of the world be related? Descended from the same “royal” line?

This leads us to a recent, 2017 discovery of a group of mummies in the Nazca region. The implications are almost unfathomable.

Carbon dating indicates that the oldest of the mummies are around 1,700 years old. Could these beings be of the same type as what the Hopi called the “ant people” from the 4 corners region? Could this type of being also be the subject of the most viewed declassified documents on the FBI website, the infamous “Guy Hottel” report? Where a FBI field agent describes a 1950 recovery of 3 saucer craft in New Mexico, complete with 3 foot tall alien beings, to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover? DNA sequencing of these mummies finds that they only share 25% of DNA with the human genome, could these be distant relatives of the long skulled Peruvians?

Office Memorandum • UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO : DIRECTOR, FBI

FROM : GUY HOTTEL, SAC, WASHINGTON

DATE: March 22, 1950

SUBJECT: FLYING SAUCERS
INFORMATION CONCERNING

Flying Discs or Flying Saucers

The following information was furnished to SA [redacted] by [redacted]

b7C
b7D

An investigator for the Air Force stated that three so-called flying saucers had been recovered in New Mexico. They were described as being circular in shape with raised centers, approximately 50 feet in diameter. Each one was occupied by three bodies of human shape but only 3 feet tall, dressed in metallic cloth of a very fine texture. Each body was bandaged in a manner similar to the blackout suits used by speed flyers and test pilots.

b7C
b7D

According to Mr. [redacted] informant, the saucers were found in New Mexico due to the fact that the Government has a very high-powered radar set-up in that area and it is believed the radar interferes with the controlling mechanism of the saucers.

No further evaluation was attempted by SA [redacted] concerning the above.

b7C

RHK:VIM

RECORDED - 3
INDEXED - 5

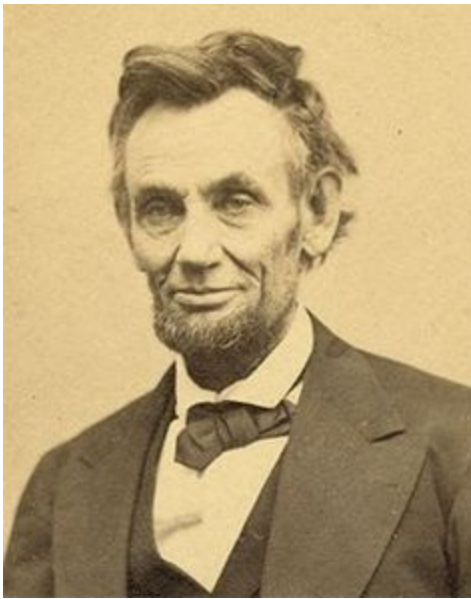

162-83894-209
MAR 23 1950

24

Well, things are certainly getting interesting now, aren't they? Could these creatures be related to our royalty and ancient ancestors? It certainly seems possible.

There's one problem though.

Everywhere from Sumeria (where their gods are depicted holding lions in their hands like kittens) to Egypt to the stories of the "Nephilim" in the Bible's hidden Book of Enoch, these "Gods" have always been depicted as GIANTS, not puny ant men. What mean?

The eyes of that species of extinct giant, whose bones fill the mounds of America, have gazed on Niagara as our eyes do now.

Abraham Lincoln

★ Favorite

Abraham Lincoln (2009). "Abraham Lincoln: Selected Speeches and Writings", p.122, Library of America

Above, is a NOT a fake quote from one of our most famous presidents. Honest Abe was not a fan of falsehoods, and indeed, this statement was not made in jest. While the lands of eastern world had been home to centralized civilization for thousands of years, North America was relatively untouched. This is most likely due to the violent and sudden melting of the North American ice cap that triggered the great flood responsible for wiping out Plato's Atlantis. As such, there was no one to hide and destroy history on this land. The decentralized native americans, doing their best to live in harmony with nature, had no need (or ability) to destroy evidence that contradicted their belief structure (unlike the Vatican and kings of the east). Because of this, previously hidden history lay underneath the feet of the european settlers, and while tilling their land, they discovered things that their rulers would rather had remained buried.

GIANTS OF NORTH AMERICA

Above is a selection of newspaper articles written in the 1800's where skeletons of humans 7 feet tall and above were discovered. Given the level of mass communication at the time, these events were easily contained and forgotten. How, you ask? Well, most of these finds ended with the bones being sent to the Smithsonian for further study, including these two specimens below:

While reading through the microfilm at the Steelville library, three reports of the find were uncovered, including the photo that shows Les Eaton, a 6-foot man laid out next to the 8-foot skeleton in Dr. Parkers office (see image below).

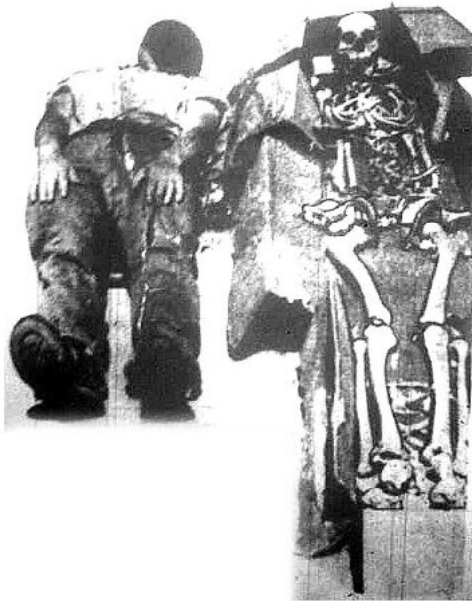

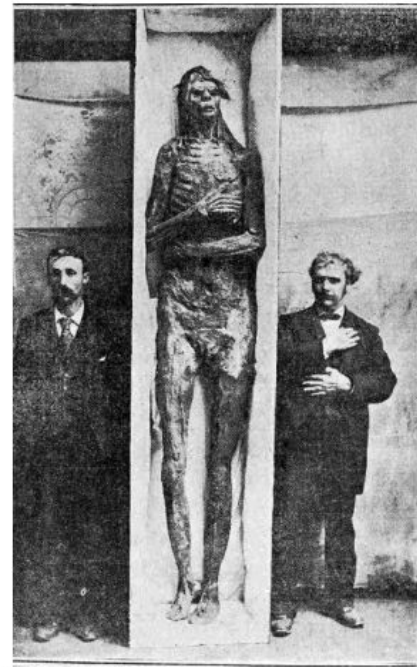

Photo of Les Eaton next to giant skeleton.

The San Diego giant was purchased by the Smithsonian for $500 ($14,000 in today's money) in 1895, although they later claimed it was a hoax.

Also interesting to include, is that many Native American tribes spoke of these giants in their legends. Take for instance the Iroquois, the Osage, the Tuscaroras, the Hurons, the Omahas, all mention ancient giants. Some even say their royalty was descended from them, and their height a symbol of royal blood. Things get especially interesting when you learn that they were also described as having light skin and RED hair. Remember, the reason that Cortez was greeted as a returning god by the Aztecs was because of his pale skin. A large amount of these remains were discovered buried in mounds. These legends place the mound builders at around 13,000 years ago. Not only the same Younger Dryas Period pre-flood time as Atlantis, but also during the time of Megafauna (massive organisms like mammoths, mastodons, and sabre-tooth tigers).

At this point, it is important to remember that this same period is where we date the oldest civilization ever “officially” discovered Göbekli Tepe was inhibited before being PURPOSELY buried. “Göbekli Tepe” infact, simply means “Potbellied Hill” in Turkish. Indeed it too was buried in a “mound”, safe from the forces of nature. Also a good time to bring back up “Serpent Mound” in Ohio, where many giants were discovered as well.

Also interesting to note, is in 1990, the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) was passed. Any remaining giant skeletons and bones were removed from public display and buried according to the traditions of individual tribes.

So where does this leave us? We have now been exposed to evidence of not only not only the species of elongated skull, short beings, but a giant one as well. Both elongated skulls and giants (who would naturally have a similar brain volume) were found to have genetic red hair that supposedly originated near Sumeria, the official “birthplace” of civilization. The “Nephilim” of the Book of Enoch were described as “fallen angels”, which is interesting when you consider that according to the declassified “Guy Hottel” FBI memo, the beings in the UFO were very short. Being of such small stature, while being great for fitting in UFO's and living underground (less dirt needing to be removed for smaller tunnels, and the pale skin not an issue for subterranean living), this form would NOT be optimal for ruling over a human population. Perhaps the "cross breeding" of Gods/Nephilim and humans described by these ancient cultures, is in fact, describing a process in which these beings crossed their own DNA with those of humans, with an emphasis on retaining skull capacity. As we've talked about earlier, the brain, and the pineal gland (3rd eye) it contains, is how humans connect to the Aether, or infinite intelligence, and influence our reality with thoughts (law of attraction). Could having a larger brain/pineal gland increase a being's connection to the Aether and allow them much greater intelligence and influence over reality? It's certainly possible.

The above Sumerian image shows the Anunnaki beings seemingly manipulating a DNA like structure. If you look closely, you can see the beings behind them are holding not only the pine cone, but the little hand bag “gift” that we have seen across cultures from South America all the way to Göbekli Tepe (as seen below). Could these two items represent the “gifts” of the pineal gland and sacred knowledge that makes modern civilization possible?

It's even possible that the modification was made in such a way that the preservation of brain capacity was prioritized even after generations of cross breeding with normal sized humans (which would explain the elongated skull, non-giants).

So, if these giants/elongated skull creatures were the “gods” of old, what happened to them, and how have they managed to maintain control for so long?

Sumerian Tree of Life

Kabbalah with Snake

DNA

The answer lies in the Occult. While the phrase “Occult knowledge” has an extremely dark and negative connotation in modern society, the word “occult” simply means “hidden”(above is the symbol of the occult “Kabbalah”. Given that you’ve made it this far in this guide, you’ll no doubt realize MUCH has been purposely hidden from us. The question now is how exactly, what vehicle did these beings use to make sure this knowledge did not become commonplace?

Secret societies.

To be fair, these “mystery schools” have not always been “secret” per say, but those of the likes of Plato had to be requested to be joined, they weren’t exactly running around recruiting people off the streets. And indeed, much of this knowledge is in fact, “hidden in plain sight”, in order to make sure it’s discovery by the few is less impactful, and less likely to spread due to its familiarity to fiction (and well known symbols) to the common man.

So where do we begin to analyze these Occult organizations? Well, it’s safe to say that this knowledge originates from Atlantean, pre-flood civilization, as such, the last bastions of their wisdom lay in their colony of Egypt.

Above is a depiction of the God of writing, history and knowledge, Thoth (notice the continuing bird head motif from the Annunaki and . According to Egyptian mythology he was the “motherless” offspring of Horus and Set. Horus being the reincarnation of Osiris (which we covered earlier as having many connections to Enki, Jesus and Quetzalcoatl), and Set being the one who killed Osiris, Thoth is seen as the keeper of balance. In the myths he heals both Horus and Set at different times in their battle. A fitting place for an entity of knowledge, as indeed, information is the great equalizer. Everytime in history that access to information has gone up, so has equality (Bible translated from Latin/Protestant revolution, printing press/American revolution, the internet/the current Great Awakening this guide represents).

All funerary spells could be regarded as works of Thoth. A tradition grew up that Thoth had written forty-two books containing all the knowledge needed by humanity. Some of this was occult knowledge to be revealed only to initiates who would not misuse the power it gave them. The Greeks identified Thoth with their messenger god, Hermes. The body of literature known as the Hermetica claimed to preserve the teachings of Hermes Trismegistus (Thoth the Thrice Great). Hermes Trismegistus was eventually reinterpreted as a great thinker who had lived thousands of years in the past (211).

Above is an excerpt from the church father Clement’s (c. 150-215 CE) “Stromata”. In this text, Clement of Alexandria explains the connection between the Greek messenger of the gods Hermes and Thoth. As we covered earlier, not only does Hermes staff represent the human energy system, but his Hermetic principles have been studied by many occult groups, including those that the founding fathers belonged to.

The 42 books of Thoth are collectively known as the legendary “Book of Thoth”, that supposedly contained the sum total of sacred Egyptian knowledge. Unfortunately, no official copies of this work survive, as they were lost during the previously mentioned burning of the Library of Alexandria. Like the rest of knowledge supposedly destroyed there, it is rumored that these books still exist, having been whisked away by mystery school initiates, and more than likely, the Romans themselves. Why would the Romans do this? Quite possibly because they understood exactly how equalizing this information could be, and therefore needed it hidden in order to subjugate the Egyptian people.

It is interesting to note, that while the burning of the main Library of Alexandria is attributed to Julius Caesar in 48 B.C. it is not until shortly after Rome became a christian empire under Constantine that the last of the knowledge (roughly 10% of what Alexandria held) was destroyed when the Temple of Serapis was converted into a Christian Church (probably around 391 AD). This is interesting as it shows the Christians also seemed to want to eliminate this ancient knowledge. Some interesting facts to consider here is that the date given for Rome becoming christian is precisely 330 A.D., and that the life of Jesus Christ took place only 50 years after Alexandria's destruction, and he himself was said to be crucified at age 33 (33 A.D.) Given the occult significance of 33, and what we know about the similarities between Christianity and the religions (which the church destroyed nearly all records of) of possible Atlantean colonies like those of Egypt and the Aztec, we are lead to an interesting possibility.

RAISING THE CHRISM: SANTA CLAUS
JOSEPH MARY AND THE CRUCIFIXION

1. The Pineal Gland 'Joseph' secretes the milk, the Pituitary 'Mary' secretes the honey, both from the same source the Claustrum 'Santa Claus'.

2. The two sacred oils travel down into the solar plexus via the semi-lunar ganglion Pneumogastric nerve

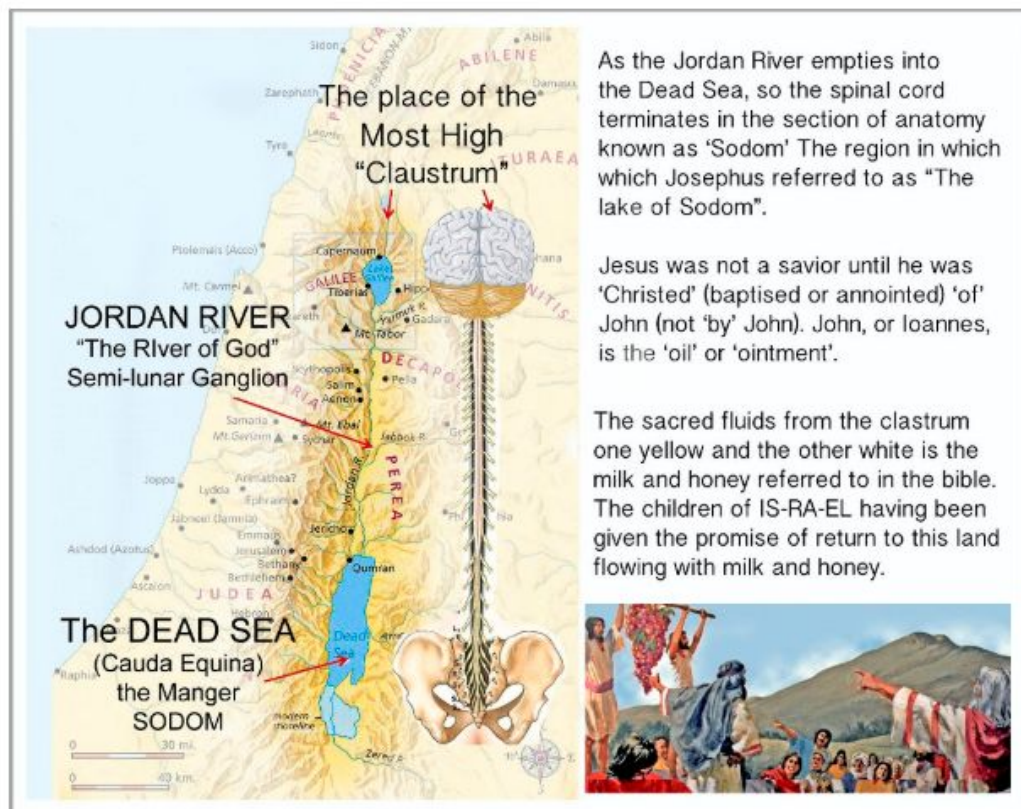

3. The Psycho-Physical Germ 'the Fruit of the Tree of Life' is born in the Solar Plexus 'the Manger'

4. The Ida (red), Pingala (blue), two nervw fluids where at the crossing of the medulla oblongata the crucifixion takes place where it rests for 2 and a half days.

5. The sacred oilr returns after the crossing 'the crucifiction' it enters the cerebellum 'Golgotha' the place of the skull. The fluid 'Christ'is refined 1000 x fold.

Could the idea of a historical “Christ” (Greek word for oil) figure, simply be the creation of the Roman empire consolidating ancient wisdom into a single, centralized, more easily controllable movement? Indeed the holidays of Christmas and Easter do hold astrological significance, accurately following the Earth’s energy cycle (driven by the Sun, or “Son”, which is why many pagans also celebrate them). Not to mention that the process of achieving “Christ Consciousness” (the concept of attaining full communion with the omnipresent, infinite intelligence of the 5th dimensional Aether/Akashic records) is symbolized in the life of Jesus. Mainly his 33 years of life, symbolizing the path of the “chrism” oil from the root chakra up the 33 vertebrae in the human spine to the Pineal gland?

The Holy Land

Above you can see even the Ancient stories of the Old Testament, that all three of the world's most dominant Abrahamic religions share hold similar metaphorical messages. Once again we are confronted with the idea that there is seemingly one divine truth that has been told in many ways across the world.

This great unifying religion of Catholic Christianity, was used to unite a huge swath of the world for nearly 1500 years. With the Pope in Rome having a huge influence over the leadership of Europe, both directly and indirectly. Even today it is a global religion, ultimately controlled by Rome. There would be 3 main transitions for the empire, and a 3rd "Reich" attempted (perhaps successfully) by Hitler

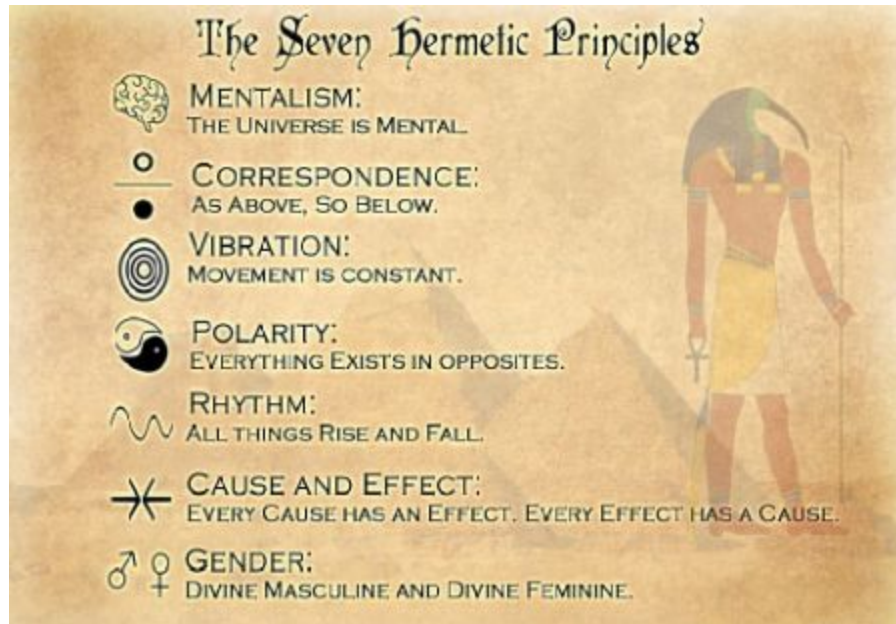

Ok, we seem to got ahead of ourselves a little bit here. Back to the Occult

There are three major texts that contain Hermetic doctrines:

- The Corpus Hermeticum is the most widely known Hermetic text. It has 18 chapters, which contain dialogues between Hermes Trismegistus and a series of other men. The first chapter contains a dialogue between Poimandres (who is identified as God) and Hermes. This is the first time that Hermes is in contact with God. Poimandres teaches the secrets of the universe to Hermes. In later chapters, Hermes teaches others, such as his son Tat and Asclepius.
- The Emerald Tablet of Hermes Trismegistus is a short work which contains a phrase that is well known in occult circles: "As above, so below." The actual text of that maxim, as translated by Dennis W. Hauck, is: "That which is Below corresponds to that which is Above, and that which is Above corresponds to that which is Below, to accomplish the miracle of the One Thing".^[39] The Emerald Tablet also refers to the three parts of the wisdom of the whole universe. Hermes states that his knowledge of these three parts is the reason why he received the name Trismegistus ("Thrice Great" or "Ao-Ao-Ao" [which mean "greatest"]). As the story is told, the Emerald Tablet was found by Alexander the Great at Hebron, supposedly in the tomb of Hermes.^[58]
- The Perfect Sermon (also known as The Asclepius, The Perfect Discourse, or The Perfect Teaching) was written in the 2nd or 3rd century AD and is a Hermetic work similar in content to The Corpus Hermeticum.

societies. Hermes, called “thrice greatest” as he was considered the greatest of all philosophers, priests and kings. As such, the Masons base all of their symbols, and initiation ceremonies off those of Hermes. Pythagoras himself studied geometry with the Egyptians, their knowledge obtained from the same deity, with who the creation of letters themselves is attributed. Some scholars even believe that Hermes was known to the Jews as “Enoch”. Hermes was known to the Latin as Mercury, as this planet is closest to the Sun, and he being the messenger of the Gods.

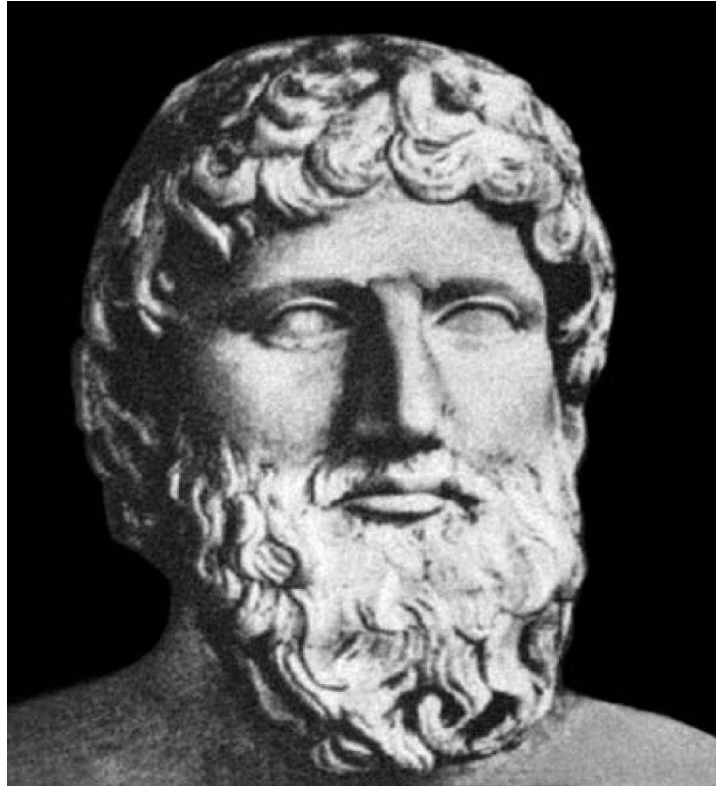

Above is a list of the 3 main bodies of work attributed to this entity, and therefore studied by these occult societies. Perhaps the most impactful is that of the Emerald Tablet, which contains the text that the Hermetic principle “as above, so below” is derived from. The rest of the 7 Hermetic principles come to us from the “Kybalion”, published by anonymous authors in 1908 under the name “The Three Initiates”. The relation to Hermes himself here is questionable given the modern publishing, but given that Mystery school initiates are supposedly the only ones with access to the original 42 books, it is possible that this is just the first time someone had come forward with it.

So where should we begin to pick up the trail of these mystery schools? Perhaps with Pythagoras, born of the coast of Turkey (where we know an Atlantean age civilization existed, along with a massive underground city), he traveled the world in search of knowledge, including to Egypt where he studied with the priests of Thebes, then the astrologer priests of Babylon and then to Greece where he was initiated into mystery schools. He would settle down in Greek Crotona and begin his “Pythagorean Brotherhood” to pass down his knowledge. He taught much about mathematics, reincarnation, and is even credited with identifying Venus (remember this planet’s associations with Christ figures?) as the morning/evening star.

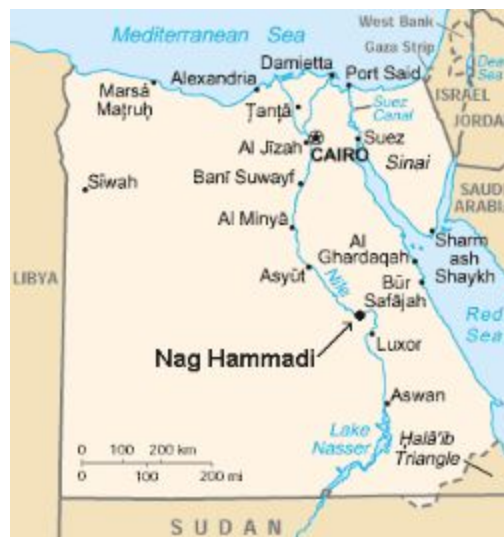

Ultimately, his brotherhood would eventually involve themselves with local politics and be chased out of town. The initiates would be forced to flee across Greece, and many attribute this to the birth of Occultism in the west.

At long last we find ourselves back to Plato (423 BC to BC 348), the man with which we obtain our account of the Atlantis civilization. Plato, like Pythagoras before him, would travel the mediteranean in search of knowledge. A student of Socrates, he was said to have studied geometry with the legendary Euclid as well. According to research and translations done by the Neoplatonist Thomas Taylor, he would be initiated into the “Greater Mysteries” in the subterranean chambers of the Great Pyramid itself. This is interesting as we have covered in depth in this guide how much can be learned from studying the pyramids. Plato would return to Greece and start the “Academy” a mystery school that would outlive him. His legacy is yet another building block of western thinking.

Following Plato, we had the Gnostics (who interpreted Christian teachings in a different light, portraying God as evil and Christ as a knowledge bringing savior (similar to the Enki/Enlil dynamic of Sumeria) based on the work of Basilides of Alexandria) around 120 A.D. The Gnostics are interesting as, although commonly tied to Christianity, their beliefs and their knowledge predate the religion itself. This knowledge, sourced from the same Library of Alexandria that held other antediluvian texts, gives us a very interesting look at how exactly Atlantean age thinkers viewed the universe.

Much of what we know about the Gnostics originates from the “Nag Hammadi library”, a collection of leather bound texts found in Egypt in a canopic jar circa 1945. These manuscripts are believed to date back to the late 3rd century, and to have been buried to prevent their destruction at the hands of the new Roman church. They included works of Plato, as well as books from the Corpus Hermeticism. Like stated earlier, these texts describe the universe as being a virtual reality (they called it “hal”), created by a malevolent “archons”. These artificial beings are parasitical in nature, feeding off of negative human emotion. These archons had the appearance of unborn babies, with grey skin and big dark eyes. Ring any bells?

These reptilian like “Gods” they referred to as the “demiurge”, and the gnostics believed this was the entity that the Abrahamic religions believed to be the God. They described these beings as lacking the imagination of humanity and being based on inversion of the natural order. Essentially a death cult. This means they gained strength from fear, war and things like human sacrifice.

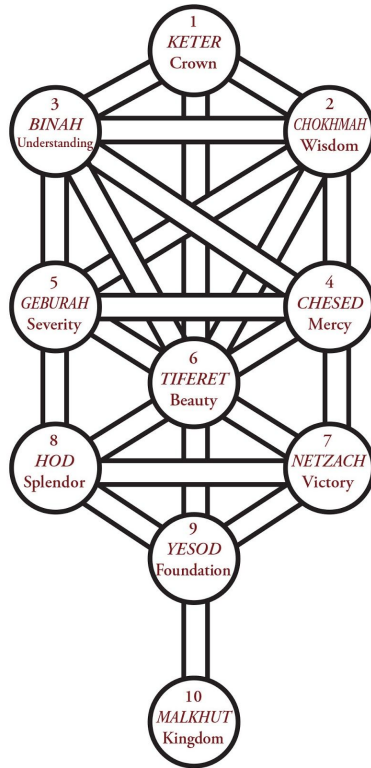

Could this Alexandrian group be describing these reptilian gods (that bred with humans) from around the world that we have covered earlier? Is this why they are so often shown devouring humans? It's certainly possible.

From here on, we had the centralization and censorship of Rome, and once established, the Catholic church attempted to horde all ancient knowledge for themselves within their Vatican archive. The following thousand years is what is referred to as the “Dark Ages”.

It wasn't all boring during this time, as this period included the Crusades, where the Pope ordered the knights of Europe to reclaim the Holy Land. In 1118, the Knights Templar would be formed stationed at the site of Solomon's temple, with the stated purpose of defending pilgrims from Muslim raiders. Historical evidence shows they spent a lot of time digging under said temple, but does not say if they found anything. While starting with only 9 knights, around 1136 they became very popular in Europe and soon attracting an abundance of funding. This huge amount of cash flow lead to the creation of banking methods we still use today, including checks. This was the first major decentralization of power from the almighty Vatican.

While Europe was under strict ideological lock down, the secrets of the ages could still be found in the middle east, this is perhaps on the reasons the Vatican was so eager to conquer the land. As such, in 1230 A.D. books obtained from trade with those lands resulted in the discovery of the “Kabbalah” a practice of decoding divine knowledge hidden in the pages of the Jewish Torah. The word “Kabbalah” simple means “oral tradition”, and indeed it’s followers believed it so sacred that it should only be passed down from person to person. This information would go on to influence the Occult of the west greatly.

What transpired next is the legendary events of Friday, October the 13th, 1307. Some say it was the Templars' wealth and power that attracted their destruction, but according to the king of France (who the Knights had just denied a loan to), the Templars had been participating in the worship of Baphomet, regardless, they were ordered to be arrested. It's very possible that the Templars had gotten into some kind of Devil worship, we know ancient cultures from the Babalonians (with Moloch) to the Aztec participated in human sacrifice. Given their power and access to the information of the middle east it is possible they had acquired occult wisdom. Regardless, the message to any group that would threaten the dominance of the Church, its monopoly on occult knowledge or its kings was clear: stay in the shadows or face elimination.

Luckily for Europe, the crusades of Constantinople would result in the influx of a great amount of Greek and Roman literature and with the return of knowledge like Heremitism, began the Renaissance. Spanning from the 14th to the 16th century, it also included the Protestant Reformation ignited by Martin Luther and his 95 Theses. The translation of the Bible from Latin into the languages of the people greatly damaged the Church's monopoly on esoteric knowledge.

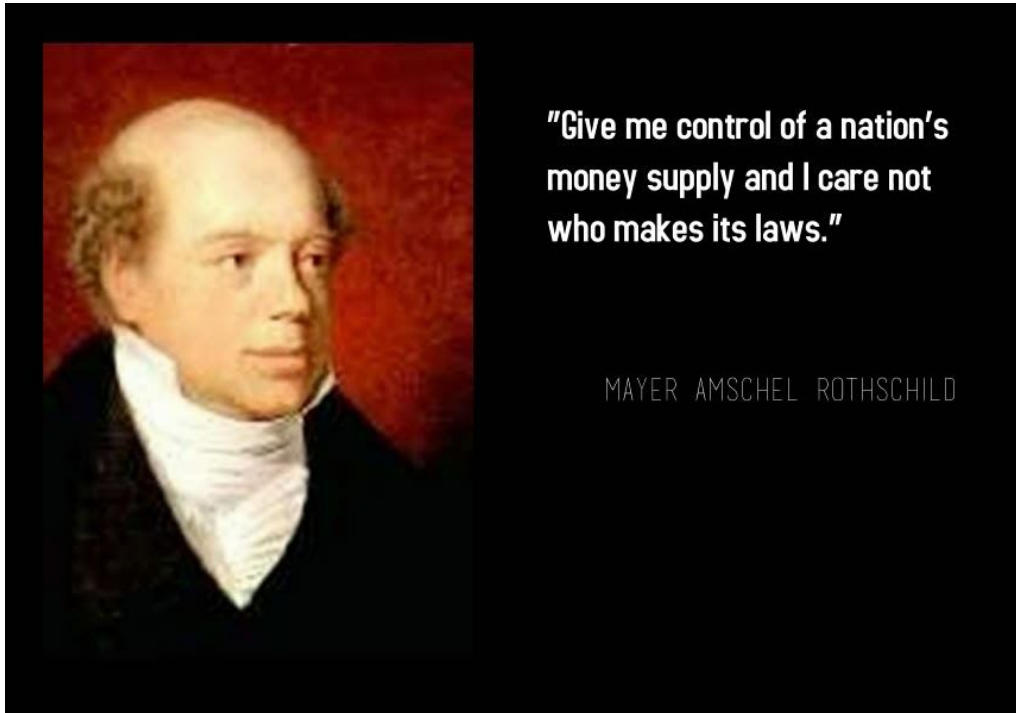

While it is not certain if the Templars had picked up on Satanist practices, it is undeniable that other later groups did. Enter the Sabbatean Frankists. This group began with one Sabbatai Zevi around 1666 A.D. Using the wisdom of the Kabbalah (and supposedly the magic powers it gave him), Sabbatai amassed a huge following posing as the messiah. Eventually, the Sultan of Turkey forced him to convert to Islam, and here began the practice of practicing Sabbateanism in secret. From there on, Sabbateans would publicly declare themselves Jews and Muslims, while privately practicing something very different. The beliefs of this group were extremely twisted, they believed essentially that “evil” only existed in the minds of the gentile. Because of this, they believed anything taboo to be holy. Thus the Satanist practices. In fact, they believed that committing these evil acts would force God to come and correct things quicker. Later this movement would be carried on by one Jacob Frank and it’s tentacles wrapped around the world’s power structure.

Now the moment we've all been waiting for: the Freemasons. The first grand lodge of this previously Middle Age stonemason guild was established on June 24th, 1717. Like mentioned earlier in this piece, their members include Royalty, many US founding fathers (9 of those who signed the Declaration of Independence, including Hancock and Benjamin Franklin) and Police chiefs. You can find their lodges in nearly every major city across the United States. As builders they have a great knowledge of sacred geometry. This organization has been used to centralize power all across the western world as brother Masons will always pick a brother when a new position opens up. Deeply steeped in Hermetic tradition and symbology, their order has 33 ranks, with few making it to the top.

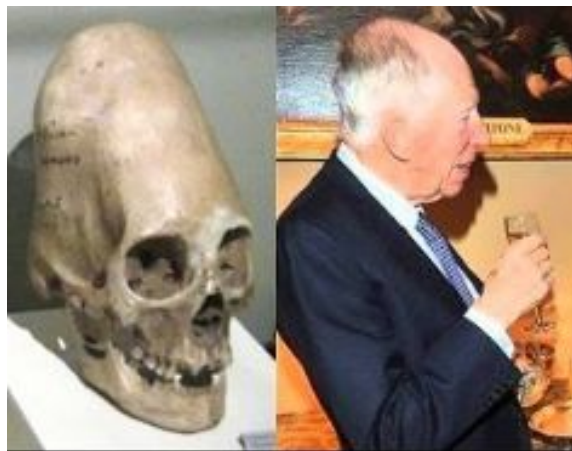

Next up, we have a group which I'm sure everybody has heard of: The Illuminati. Founded on May 1st, 1776, in Bavaria by Adam Weishaupt. Accustomed to the operation of secret societies by proximity to the Jesuits (themselves a group with occult initiation rites, meetings and teachings), Adam formed the group originally with the idea that the kings and the Vatican could be overthrown. Now the question is, where did this Adam Weishaupt get the power and influence to create such an organization? Well, luckily for him, one Jacob Frank, and his cult of Sabbatean Frankists were looking for an organization to gain power with. Jacob Frank not only claimed to be the reincarnation of Sabbatai Zevi, but of the biblical Jacob himself. One thing I haven't mentioned before is the fact that this cult based its beliefs around one specific book of the Kabbalah: the Zohar. "Zohar" means "radiance" or "illuminated", this is where the Illuminati get their name.

By teaming up with the Sabbatean Frankist Rothschild banking family, this organization would go on to infiltrate/create not only Zionist Judaism, but Wahabi Islam, the Roman Catholic church, Hollywood and just about every government and intelligence agency around the world.

This Rothschild banking family (name previously Bauer), really got its start in 1760 when Mayer Amschel Rothschild sent his 5 sons to establish themselves in London, Paris, Frankfurt, Vienna, and Naples. While the Illuminati that they would rather help establish would consider themselves the spiritual successors to the Templars, the Rothschild's truly emulated them with their banking practices. Much like how the Templars used their vast network to offer convenient banking services like checks, that allowed travelers to withdraw their wealth in many countries. This network of banks was also convenient for another purpose: funding wars. From the Napoleonic wars forward, the Rothschilds would find a way to fund both sides of every western war. This included the American Civil War, WWI and WWII. Much like the Archons that the Gnostics describe, this family obtains their power from living like parasites, profiting off of human bloodshed, and their similarities to those beings don't end there:

This may be a good time to revisit this concept of “bloodlines”, as you may think that the American Revolution of 1776 would have marked a turning point away from royal ruling bloodlines. Unfortunately, it was not. In 2012, a 12 year old from California was able to track back 42 presidents heritage back to one medieval king: King John of England. The same king that signed the Magna Carta, a landmark legal doctrine that the US would base some of its own founding documents on.

As we covered earlier, the royalty from around the world have claimed their divine right to rule from their bloodlines. Many of these families claim to be directly descended from the gods, like the Egyptian pharaohs and Japanese emperors. The Illuminati has a collection of 13 bloodlines, tracing their origins to different occult groups from around the world. This concept was covered in Fritz Springmeier's "Bloodlines of the Illuminati".

They believe that their bloodlines give them the unique ability to practice occult magic. Looking at these 13 families, you can see how far reaching their influence has been. So what kind of rituals does this hidden ruling hand participate in? How do we know about them?

The Bohemian Grove. While dismissed as crazy conspiracy theory for many years, in 2000 Alex Jones and his cameraman were able to gain entry to this legendary club and record their rituals. During said rituals they seem to offer mock sacrifice to an owl statue, the owl is a major symbol of the Illuminati, as seen on one of their handouts below:

Ok, so now that we have established what the Illuminati is and which families are involved, what have they accomplished in our civilization since, and where are we now?

Well, shortly following their creation, not only did they help orchestrate the French Revolution, but they began work on subjugating the newly formed American nation as well. Like stated earlier, they funded both sides of the Civil War, but given that they did not fully control the US money system through a central bank, President Lincoln was able to print his “greenbacks” to fund the war when the international banks wouldn’t offer fair rates of interest. Clearly, this would not do. While they faced much resistance from the americans, eventually (only 1 year following the tragic deaths of opponents of a private central bank Jacob Aster, Benjamin Guggenheim and Isa Strauss aboard the Titanic (itself built by J.P. Morgan, a Rothschild cut out)), in 1913 the Federal Reserve act was passed. This act established the US Federal Reserve, which is completely privately owned and it’s leadership unelected and unaccountable to congress (check out the Illuminati owl on the federal reserve note below). One year following this began WWI, where Germany was destroyed, setting the stage for the occult driven Nazi empire to take power.

We've already covered in depth the Thule and Vrill societies that would influence the Nazi empire, but we have not covered the fact that it was AMERICAN industrialists that supplied them with their money and materials.

Indeed, American industrial giants like Ford, Rockefeller, AT&T all lent the Nazis a hand. One lesser known fact is that there was another iconic American dynasty assisting Hitler, the Bush family. While AT&T was supplying the Germans with a state of the art communication system to command their forces with, and the Harriman brothers were building the railroads that would transport Jewish prisoners to Auschwitz, George H. W. Bush's grandfather was providing funding to the Nazis through his Union Bank. The Bush family would also profit off of the German concentration camps and use that money to finance two successful presidential campaigns.

The screenshot shows the top navigation bar of The Guardian website with the logo and 'US edition' label. Below the navigation bar, there are links for 'News', 'Opinion', 'Sport', 'Culture', 'Lifestyle', and 'More'. A secondary navigation bar lists various global regions. The main content area features a 'World news' section with the article 'How Bush's grandfather helped Hitler's rise to power'. The article's sub-headline reads: 'Rumours of a link between the US first family and the Nazi war machine have circulated for decades. Now the Guardian can reveal how repercussions of events that culminated in action under the Trading with the Enemy Act are still being felt by today's president'. The author is identified as Ben Aris in Berlin and Duncan Campbell in Washington, with a date of Saturday, 25 September 2004. The article text begins with 'George Bush's grandfather, the late US senator Prescott Bush, was a director and shareholder of companies that profited from their involvement with the financial backers of Nazi Germany. The Guardian has obtained confirmation from newly discovered files in the US National Archives that a firm of which Prescott Bush was a director was involved with the financial architects of Nazism.' To the right of the article is a yellow call-to-action box that says 'Editorially independent, open to everyone' and 'Find out more'. Below this is a 'most viewed in US' section featuring a small image and the text 'This tape rewrites everything we knew about the Beatles'.

There was something else that united these American industrialist Nazi stans, their alligiance to a particular secret society of Yale Univeristy, known as the Skull and Bones Soicety. Not only George Herbert Walker and Prescott Bush (of the Union Bank) were apart of this group, but so were the Harrimans, and later, both George Walker Bush and George Herbert Walker Bush (and the man he would run against for president, John Kerry.)

The Rothschilds of course were behind both sides of this conflict as always, with Hitler even being rumored to be a Rothschild bastard child himself. In the aftermath of the war, they leveraged the subjugation of the Jewish people that THEY themselves had orchestrated to establish their own nation in 1947, Israel. This only makes sense when you remember that the Rothschild's are Frankists, who publicly claim to be Jewish, but privately are Satanists who hate everything holy. In fact, the Balfour Declaration that had first initiated the confiscation of this area of Palestine in 1917 was addressed to the Rothschilds. Below you can see them showing it off to their puppet heads of state.

Foreign Office,
November 2nd, 1917.

5/4/4
126
075

Dear Lord Rothschild,

I have much pleasure in conveying to you, on behalf of His Majesty's Government, the following declaration of sympathy with Jewish Zionist aspirations which has been submitted to, and approved by, the Cabinet.

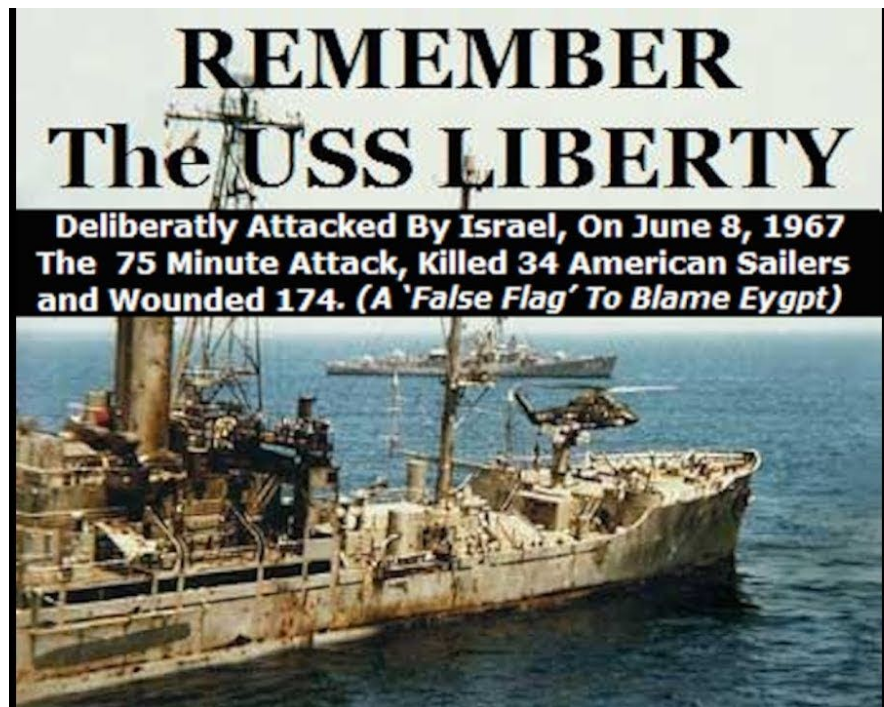

"His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of this object. It being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country"

I should be grateful if you would bring this declaration to the knowledge of the Zionist Federation.

Y. inc
Arthur Balfour

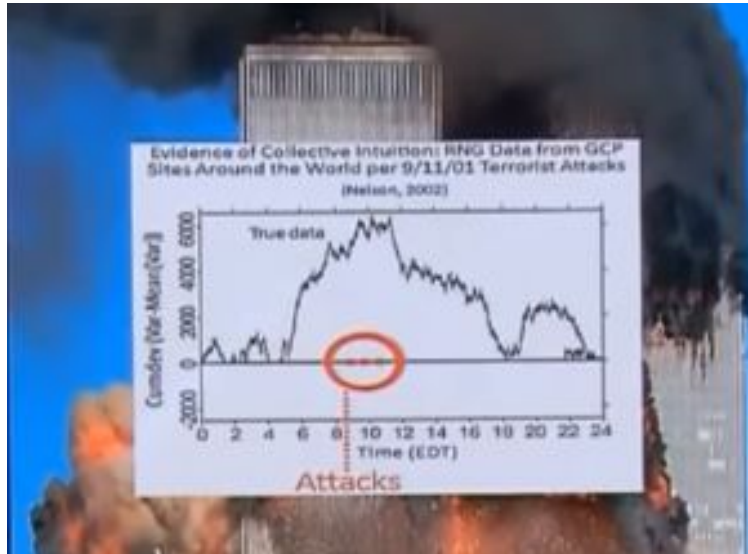

You can see how this state is used as an apparatus to control the world by the way the US treats them. Not only does the US provide upwards of 30 Billion dollars of aid to the nation yearly (while our infrastructure crumbles), a good portion of the wars we participate in are against the enemies of Israel. The nation is also known to try to provoke the US into conflicts, such as in the USS Liberty incident of June 8th, 1967. In this incident, Israeli forces attacked the USS Liberty, killing 34 and injuring another 100 or so Americans. This was claimed to be an “accident” but many believe it was intended to be used as an excuse for the US to enter the conflict that Israel was currently fighting.

Speaking of which, this is a good time to bring up a more recent incident that WAS successful in provoking the US to fight wars beneficial to Israel. Now remember, not only do wars profit these Archon bankers in financial terms, ultimately, wars are rituals. Mass blood sacrifices, used to harvest negative human emotion and keep the mass human psyche in check. As was the case with 9/11, which coincided with a huge shift in global consciousness.

In order to fully understand this event, we'll have to go back to the Nazis once again, as they seem to have had their hands in nearly every esoteric event we cover in this guide. To fully understand the nature of this horrific event in human history, we'll have to analyze the tactics of the group responsible. It all has to do with a concept known as the "Hegelian Dialectic"

This is a strategy of the ruling class that has been utilized since Roman times. Essentially, in order to accomplish a predetermined goal, you simply create a problem for your populace, then offer a solution that just happens to lead to your desired changes. In this way, your subjects DEMAND to have their rights taken away. This is what the concept of “false flags” revolve around. In 1933, the Nazis used such a tactic to consolidate Hitler’s grip on the German people.

Reichstag fire

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Reichstag fire (German: Reichstagsbrand, listen[ⓘ] help·info) was an arson attack on the Reichstag building, home of the German parliament in Berlin, on Monday 27 February 1933, precisely four weeks after Adolf Hitler was sworn in as Chancellor of Germany. Hitler's government stated that Marinus van der Lubbe, a Dutch council communist, was found near the building, and they attributed the fire to communist agitators in general—though a German court decided later that year that Van der Lubbe had acted alone, as he claimed. After the fire, the Reichstag Fire Decree was passed. The Nazi Party used the fire as a pretext that communists were plotting against the German government, and the event is considered pivotal in the establishment of Nazi Germany. The term "Reichstag fire" has come to refer to false flag actions facilitated by an authority to promote their own interests through popular approval of retribution or retraction of civil rights.

A mere 4 weeks after Hitler had become Chancellor of Germany (no small part in thanks to his American industrialist supporters), the Reichstag Building (where the German government met) was set ablaze. This event was blamed on a single communist arsonist (no doubt a patsy), and was used as the means to pass the “Reichstag Fire Decree”, which promised to protect the German people from further terrorist attacks by restricting their freedoms (sound familiar?).

Reichstag Fire Decree

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

This article includes a list of references, but its sources remain unclear because it has insufficient inline citations. Please help article by introducing more precise citations. (February 2011) (Learn how and when to remove this template message)

The Reichstag Fire Decree (German: Reichstagsbrandverordnung) is the common name of the Decree of the Reich President for the Protection of People and State (German: Verordnung des Reichspräsidenten zum Schutz von Volk und Staat) issued by German President Paul von Hindenburg on the advice of Chancellor Adolf Hitler on 28 February 1933 in immediate response to the Reichstag fire. The decree nullified many of the key civil liberties of German citizens. With Nazis in powerful positions in the German government, the decree was used as the legal basis for the imprisonment of anyone considered to be opponents of the Nazis, and to suppress publications not considered “friendly” to the Nazi cause. The decree is considered by historians as one of the key steps in the establishment of a one-party Nazi state in Germany.

This decree not only allowed the Nazi party to jail their political opponents but also censor the media as well. Here you might still be skeptical, as sure the Nazis would pull such a trick, but there’s no way the AMERICAN government would. Here it is important to remember who exactly funded the Nazis, and what role that group would have in ruling America. It all becomes obvious when you put the emblem of the Bush’s Skull and Bones Society next to that of the Nazi SS.

Indeed, these groups are one in the same. Pirates, robber barons, willing to commit any crime for big money. But if this is true, why did the Americans sentence the Nazis to death after the war in the Nuremberg Trials?? Well, the simple answer is: they didn't. Infact, the powers at be made SURE to protect their investment post WWII, and they did so through what's known as "Operation Paperclip".

In short, the US brought over 1,600 Nazi scientists and other personal after the war. These Germans would go on to infiltrate and lead many of our programs. Such as Wernher von Braun, who despite running operations at killed the slowest Jewish workers to motivate the others, would go on to become NASA's chief architect for the Saturn V rocket. Now again, you might be thinking it impossible that the US government has been hijacked by secret Nazi groups. But when you analyze the events of John F. Kennedy's presidency, it is clear that our elected government officials had very little actual control. One of the most obvious examples of this was the unauthorized, CIA sponsored "Bay of Pigs" attacks, that if successful, would've lead to the overthrow of Fidel Castro's Cuba. It was this insubordination that caused Kennedy to fire then CIA director, Allan Dulles. Dulles was a lawyer, and one of his many claims to fame is helping funnel money to the Nazis to fund the construction of their headquarters, the Brown House.

This same Allen Dulles, despite being fired by Kennedy for clear disregard for the chain of command and the elected governance of the United States, would later go on to chair the Warren Commission. The very same commission in order of investigating the late president's assassination. But still, there is no evidence that these people would willingly kill US citizens to start a war, right?

Enter “Operation Northwoods”, a proposed plan of action that was put forward following the failure of the Bay of Pigs in 1961. This plan called for false flag attacks on different Florida communities, in the hopes that the damage created would drum up the public's support for military action in Cuba.

Luckily Kennedy denied the authorization for such actions, but we can clearly see the similarities to the Reichstag Fire and the Hegelian Dialectic. When you realize all of this was going on under Kennedy's watch, it is not hard to understand exactly what groups he was alluding to in this famous speech he gave in 1961 (following the Bay of Pigs).

Of course we all know what fate awaited our dear JFK, but his interference with CIA operations wasn't the only reason for his demise. Not only was he standing in the way of the war machine, he also attempted to take back the power of the treasury from the Federal Reserve with his Executive Order 11110 on June 4th, 1963 (notice that numerology trope reappearing here?). He would be killed only a short 5 months later on November 22nd (11/22), 1963. This would be the last time the power of the Federal Reserve would be challenged until 1971, and the following oil embargo of 1974. Following WWII, the US dollar had become the world's reserve currency. The terms of this arrangement were detailed in the Bretton Woods agreement. This agreement held that the US dollar would be the reserve, which would be backed by, and redeemable for gold.

This was of course, until 1971, when France tried to redeem some of their federal reserve notes, only for Nixon to promptly pull his country's currency from a gold backing. This led to a PLUMMETING US dollar value internationally as the gig was up. This led to the oil crisis of 1973, one decade after the murder of JFK, the US found its currency's value destroyed relative to the price of oil. Oil being an essential resource for lifestyle and economy of the country, something had to be done. In 1974 the US reached a series of deals with OPEC, that ensured that they would only sell their oil for US dollars. Thus, any country who wanted oil, would first need to acquire (now non-gold backed) fiat US dollars first. This system of trading real work and products for paper that the Federal Reserve prints for free, in order to obtain oil, is known as the Petro-dollar system.

This is where we can once again tie in the hidden hand of the Sabbatean Frankist Satanists. During this oil crisis, the Saudi Arabian royal family amassed a huge amount of wealth and invested over 100 billion dollars into the spread of their extremist “Wahhabism” brand of Islam. This sect of Islam is where much of the violence and terrorism of the Islamic world originates from, including the 9/11 terrorists. So what is the tie to the Frankists? Well, in 2002 Iraqi intelligence report, a few works were cited that trace the Saudi Royal family back to the Donmeh Jews of Turkey, descended from the very same Shabbetai Zevi we covered earlier. This idea that the family would practice a different religion publicly than they do privately is certainly in line with the Frankist ideology.

Alright, now where were we? Ah yes, the Bushes. It is important to note that following the Nazi lead war funded by the Bush grandpa's Union Bank, we were then treated to Bush Sr. as CIA director, then as vice president, then as president, followed by two terms of Bush Jr. presidency. It is also important to note the family's deep ties to not only the Saudi royal family, but the family of 9/11's supposed orchestrator, Osama Bin Laden. Relationships that have scored the Bush family billions of dollars.

Alright, let's get down to the meat and potatoes here, what ACTUALLY happened on 9/11? What evidence is there of foul play? Let's take a look and see if we can find similar patterns to earlier false flag attacks we've covered.

Luckily, we don't have to look too far, as per usual, the evidence is hidden in plain sight. Above is a guidebook released by the DOJ in 2000 and an excerpt from "The Project for the New American Century" plan titled "Rebuilding America's Defenses". In this plan, it states that convincing the American public to go to war again will be hard without a "new pearl harbor". Who was apart of the group who wrote this report? None other than 10 members of the future Bush administration.

This includes names such as Jeb Bush, Vice President Dick Cheney, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, John Bolton, and even Bill Kristol.

As if this wasn't enough, guess who was on the board of "Securacom" the company in charge of not only the World Trade Centers' security, but also the security at Washington DULLES airport (where the Pentagon crash plane took off from)? None other than the little known extra Bush brother, Marvin Bush.

For more information on these attacks, make sure to watch “JFK to 9/11: Everything is a Rich Man’s Trick” and “Loose Change”, two excellent documentaries included in the source document.

So what were the desired “solutions” of this false flag in the Hegelian Dialectic? Mainly the ironically named “Patriot Act” which completely destroyed the 4th amendment and allows the government unlimited power to spy on its citizens, and of course the “War on Terror” which still rages on to this day.

So how does this tie back to the Sabbatean Frankist run states of Saudi Arabia and Israel? Well let’s start with the infamous 5 “Dancing Israelis”.

This infamous group was spotted watching the 9/11 attacks from afar, celebrating and recording the event. Below is the police report from that day.

These 5 clearly had foreknowledge of the events that would take place, and later investigations would tie them to the Israeli "Mossad" intelligence agency.

As for the Saudis, their government is currently being sued by the families of 9/11 victims, as the recently declassified "28 Pages", show that the Saudi's were in close contact with the terrorists, even providing them with funds and training.

Alright, this almost brings us back to modern day. But before we come back, there's one more thing to cover from 2001, the announcement of 9/10. The day before 9/11, Donald Rumsfeld went on television to announce to the American people that the Pentagon could not account for nearly 2.3 TRILLION dollars. The next day, the accounting offices of the Pentagon would be hit and destroyed by a "plane". Isn't that convenient? Fast forward to November of 2018, the Pentagon completes its FIRST EVER audit. The results? None, they simply informed the world they "failed" the audit. At this point, estimates of how much money the Pentagon is missing is reaching nearly 21 trillion dollars.

So where did all this money go?? It couldn't have just disappeared. But what kind of projects could even absorb the volume of money we're talking about here? For the answers, we'll have to rewind to a mere 4 months prior to 9/11.

May 9th 2001: The National Press Club holds its most-watched event of all time20 military, corporate, & government whistleblowers come out 2 expose black budget, secret projects. They describe a series of programs involving high technology that absorb 40-80 Billion dollars a year. These programs are operated on a “need to know” basis and are so secretive that even presidents aren’t allowed to be read in on them (You can find the links to this presentation and the documentary “Unacknowledged” in the sources page). So what’s going on here? Has there been any hints as to what these programs are up to?

"We stand at the birth of a new millennium, ready to unlock the mysteries of space, to free the earth from the miseries of disease, and to harness the energies, industries and technologies of tomorrow."

- Donald J Trump, Inauguration day 2017

I think people often overlook this quote, and severely underestimate its significance. Especially in light on Trump's creation of a 6th branch of the military, the freakin "Space Force". Take this in combination with the recent strange public requests of the Pentagon, and we might start to form an idea of where this money is hiding.

Both in very high and very low places.

But why Trump? Why now? If the Airforce and CIA were founded in 1947, just months after the Roswell incident to cover up/manage such projects, why would Trump be the one to finally bring some of these activities to light? Where else have we heard of advanced technologies being suppressed, stemming from the 1940's? That's right, our good friend Nikola Tesla.

Do you know who the FBI sent to retrieve his research from the New Yorker Hotel after his death?

MIT Professor and Donald Trump's Uncle, John G. Trump. Yup, Trump's uncle was the first one to have access to Tesla's research. While he told the FBI there was nothing significant to be found among the fallen mad scientist's papers, many speculate he may have found and perhaps experimented with some of Tesla's more exotic ideas. Is it possible that John may have shared some of this knowledge with Donald, and now his industrious nephew intends to finally bring some of these advancements to the public? It's certainly looks possible.

Alright, well that just about catches us up. Only one more aspect of this breakaways civilization to cover. Human trafficking. While the idea that our civilization's elite are involved in child trafficking may have been seen as a fringe conspiracy theory in the past, after the Jeffery Epstein case, this is no longer so. Jeffery not only owned a private island and ranch/compound where he trafficked children, he also enjoyed the company of some of the most well known figures in modern times. Members of royalty such as Prince Charles, Bill and Hillary Clinton, and even figures such as Bill Gates were included in his friend group. So how long has this been going on, have the elite ever been caught before?

The answer of course is yes, quite a few times. And as evil and blatant as these offenses were, they were covered up just as aggressively in the media. Given what we know about the ruling class of Sabbatean Frankist Satanists, it is hardly a surprise that they carry on the ancient traditions of child sexual abuse and sacrifice, and who do we find at the heart of one of the most prolific historical cases? George H.W. Bush, while he was vice president a child trafficking ring was discovered stealing young men from the Boystown foster home and delivering them to Whitehouse parties. This was known as the Franklin Cover Up (Please watch the “Conspiracy of Silence” documentary in the source page).

The documentary describing this crime ring and its cover up was pulled from the Discovery channel shortly before it was set to air, and many people involved with the case met mysterious and gruesome ends.

Another much overlooked case that involves the British Royalty is that of Jimmy Saville. The star of a children's TV program and close friend of the Royal family, it was found after his death that he had abused hundreds of children at hospitals.

As for the Epstein case itself, we now must ask a familiar question, why is this only happening now? Epstein was let off with a sweet heart deal by the FBI previously, why? Well, when asked, Jim Acosta, the 2008 US attorney for Miami stated that he was told to let Epstein go as he “belonged to intelligence”

Which intelligence agency you ask? Well we might find some clues by investigating the background of his right hand woman (and procurer of young girls), Ghislaine Maxwell. Her father was known to not only be associated with the KGB, but the Israeli Mossad agency as well.

Given what we know about Mossad, Israel, and the Sabbatean Frankist New World Order, it is not a stretch to believe that Epstein may have been used to entrap then blackmail powerful figures with damning evidence recorded on his properties. This would ensure complete control over the most powerful among us. This all makes it no surprise that Epstein was murdered in his jail cell before he could spill the beans on any of his powerful friends.

How can we be sure that he was killed off and didn't simply commit suicide like the official story says? Well, luckily for us, the Sabbatean Frankists made it pretty obvious.

How you ask? By killing him on their biggest feast day. The 9th of Av, or "Tisha B'Av".

As we know, the Frankists flip all that is holy, as such, they take the day of fasting the Jews practice to mourn the destruction of their two great temples throughout history, and feast on it. You might be saying now, "but wait, Epstein was found dead on the 10th of August, not the 9th!" Well, the actual date this event is observed on changes every year. Look what day it happened to fall on this year:

Well, that should just about cover everything.

We have reframed the entire universe, explored the 4th and 5th dimensions, we've explored the power of numbers and sacred geometry, absorbed the wisdom of forgotten advanced ancient pyramid builders, examined the occult knowledge and the groups that have carried their wisdom through the pages of history, and ultimately identified exactly what groups are currently in control and how they are getting exposed.

Will Trump lead the world to become an advanced, space faring race, finally free of the malevolent, parasitic Satanic elite class? Or will all of this just end up being another war being fueled on both sides by the same puppet masters?

I can't really say for sure. But more than that, I don't believe it really matters. What we hold in our hands is the greatest access to information that humankind has ever known. We might not be able to lead a revolution that eliminates our rulers, we might not even be able to spread the word far enough to fully expose them. But what I DO know we have the power to do is to become masters of our own vessels, overcome the manipulations of the ruling class and reach our god given potential as interdimensional beings.

The truth is, we are so many, and they are so few. It truly doesn't matter what happens to them out there as long as we go inside and find the wisdom to find ways to work together. Our goal should be to make who's in power matter as little as possible. We can do that through self mastery.

That's what the next section "Yoked" will be all about.

We'll be applying all the concepts we covered in "Woke" and applying them to real life. In this way we'll learn to unlock our full potential in terms of health and wellness.

We'll be covering how to learn more about ourselves through Numerology and Astrology. How to manage our bodies and habits to unlock the christ consciousness talked about by so many ascended masters throughout history. We'll cover the human energy system, how best to reset our minds and tune ourselves in to our optimal reality. We'll also expose Big Pharma, Big Agriculture and Chemical and how exactly they poison our population. We'll explore practices such as fasting and weight lifting to reach our fitness goals, and go over ways to utilize our minds to accelerate the process.

But before that, I just want to thank you all for reading and supporting my work. This truly has been one of the most fulfilling projects of my life, and it wouldn't have been possible without you.

Thank you, & much love,

Drutang

